Cotton Comforter Program Started

A cotton comforter program, as a supplement to the cotton mattress program, has been started in North Carolina, announces Miss Ruth Current, State home demonstration agent of N. C. State College. Every family who has received a cotton mattress is eligible to receive four pounds of cotton and 10 yards of percale with which to make a comforter.

The program of distributing surplus cotton to low income families is sponsored by the State College Extension Service, the AAA, and the Surplus Marketing Administration of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Although the mattress program did not start until mid-summer of 1940 in most of the counties, already 39,069 mattresses have been made in 83 counties, and about 46,000 more applications are on hand. Of these, some 24,000 have been approved and cotton and ticking is on hand in the counties for making these mattresses.

We feel that the comforter program will be a great aid in our program of helping low income rural families, Miss Current declared. We expect to place 50 pound cotton mattresses in 100,000 North Carolina farm homes, and that means all of these families can receive a comfort thereby sleeping not only on a corner of the cotton surplus, but under a part of it.

The comforts will be made in the mattress-making centers, and competent supervisors will be on hand to show the families how to make the comforts, just as they are now instructing in the making of the mattresses. The only charge for these materials is a small fee for the cost of such materials as thread, needles, and fuel to heat the centers. This usually amounts to $1.00 per mattress.
