

REV. FISHER DELIVERS SCOUT SERMON

Country is not mere willingness to fight for it. It means living for it, loving our Country, cherishing its great traditions and working for its betterment.

"The red blooded Scout declares with understanding and determination I will do my best to do my duty to others. He is ready to be kind and helpful in the home, at school and on the street; in fact at all times ever useful as a helpful Scout. In order to do this the Scout realizes above everything else that he must keep himself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight. Not only the Scout but everyone should realize that if they are going to be able to render their duty to God, Country and others they must have a clean body, clean mind and a clean soul.

"Living a straight clean life is living a sane, intelligent life. It means filling life so full of worth while things that there is no room for the other.

"And now may the blessing of our Heavenly Scout Master rest upon each of us and every regular Scout, and may we follow the trail that leads to Him."

IT'S GREAT TO BE A SCOUT

Roy Bridges, O. D. McDaniel, Charles Wilson, Wilson Ledford and Mexico, which was one of the many places of interest they visited last summer.

If you don't believe it's great to be a Scout, ask any of the four boys of Troop 4 who made the 5,500 trip through 13 states and Mexico last summer. Scoutmaster H. C. Wilson, Assistant Scoutmaster O. D. McDaniel, and Scouts Roy Smith, Charles Wilson, Roy Bridges and Wilson Ledford left the Best Town in the State, on July 5th for New Mexico and returned eleven days later. The travelers from Troop Four, which is sponsored jointly by Grace Methodist Church, and the Phenix Mill, saw so many places of interest that it would be impossible to record them here, but the Herald Editor thought it would be a good idea to recall the trip to other boys during National Boy Scout Week.

Haywood E. Lynch, Editor of The Herald, visited this troop last week, and found the boys still excited about the things they saw and did last summer. The boys all replied in unison that the most interesting place they visited was the "Billy the Kid" Museum.

is one especially interesting illustration:

When drafting men for military service was under consideration, some government officials favored deferring watchmakers because they would be useful in making the fuses which explode shells and bombs. But now these fuses are being produced. And men who regularly work on women's minute modern wrist watches are too clumsy for fuse making.

Watchmakers just didn't have the required skill. So the fuse producers turned to women who are needle workers, doing embroidery, crocheting, and other fine handwork. The result is perfect fuses.

It sounds surprising to change embroiderers into fuse makers. But other similar transfers are just as surprising.

For example, War Department officers originally planned for an army of only 400,000 men. But now they are planning for 4,000,000. Consequently, they need more of everything to arm, feed, clothe, and care for these 4 million men.

Mosquito netting is important, with many training camps being located near water, to keep soldiers from getting malaria and other diseases, possibly even yellow fever. But existing mosquito netting makers couldn't supply the necessary quantities.

So now some of the leading producers of women's lingerie are making mosquito netting.

There are many other such examples. One factory, which made machines for tobacco plants, now is producing Diesel engine parts; dyes and tools are being produced in a button plant; a maker of laundry machines is turning out machines which will bore and rifle gun barrels.

The willingness of these manufacturers to do even more is making a definite impression in Washington. One man who processes fish oil says his four fishing steamer were available for use as mine sweepers if the government needs them; a chemical company owner offers to go out of that business and let his plant be used for something else if the government wishes; a creamery plant owner suggests that his facilities might be converted into chemical production.

While all these things are being done by industry, Washington is watching closely what is done to use to hamper production in important fields. And labor unions in many cases are slowing down rather than speeding up production. Here is an authenticated report of such a case:

One defense manufacturer employ ed a new worker who was ambitious and energetic. The first week this man turned out 1,100 of a particular article. A union leader asked him: "Are you trying to show up the rest of us? You'd better cut down that production rate." So the next week, the new man's production dropped to 600—it was either that or lose his job.

Slow-down is just as bad as actual striking. That's why Congress is getting interested in the matter.
