Farmers Get Pay For Bagging

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 12.—Cotton farmers who wrap their bales in cotton bagging henceforth will receive payment for acres sown in addition to the gross weight of their bales, the National Cotton Council announced recently.

Under agreements negotiated by the Council between mills, trade associations and cotton exchanges, all trading rules governing the buying and selling of cotton have been amended to compensate the seller for use of cotton bagging in place of burlap, jute or other materials.

"These agreements," according to Hugh M. Comer, cotton mill executive and chairman of the Council's committee on cotton bale construction, "will former procedure under which the farmer was penalized for use of his own product. This indemnity him completely for the difference in weight between bagging and jute bagging and remove the last obstacle to the adoption of cotton wrappings for cotton bales throughout the entire industry."

Mr. Comer said that serious shortages of jute and burlap for use on cotton bales had made it imperative that protection be given to farmers in time for the movement of the current crop. In recognition of such shortages, the Department of Agriculture has subsidized the manufacture of sufficient cotton bagging to cover four million bales, or approximately one third of the 1942 crop.

Under previous practice, the difference in weight between these cotton coverings and the heavier jute would have resulted in direct cash loss to farmers in excess of $5,000,000.

TO Shoot More We Must Talk Less

The daily use of long distance and local telephone service throughout the "war busy" Southeast is mounting in such increasing volume that telephone lines and central offices are becoming seriously congested with the burden of calls.

We cannot relieve the congestion by adding to our facilities because the materials needed are now being used in the manufacture of weapons of war (a machine gun in action uses in four minutes enough copper to make a mile and a half of telephone wire), so in order to keep present telephone facilities available for vital war calls we must all talk less.

With your help, which we are confident you will voluntarily give, we can keep long distance and local telephone lines clear for the urgent messages of war agencies and industries engaged in war work.

How You Can Help

Long Distance Calls

Make only the most necessary long distance calls. Be brief. Place your calls before 9 a. m. between noon and 5 p. m. and 7 p. m. or after 9 p. m. Stay near your telephone after you have placed your call. Place only your own call and avoid the necessity for another call. Whenever possible, call by number.

Local Calls

Use your telephone sparingly—avoid unnecessary calls. Be sure to replace your receiver on the hook. Look up numbers you are not sure of and help avoid the calling of wrong numbers. Make your conversations brief. Teach your children good telephone habits.
