Winter Legumes To Be Planted Early

The farmer who starts getting ready for a crop a month or two before time to plant it, is usually the one who makes the best crop. Early planting is important for all crops but it is almost imperative for Austrian winter peas, vetch, and crimson clover, says E. H. Blair, Extension agronomist at State College. When these crops are planted on time, they do their growing during the part of the year when the land is not needed for anything else. But when planted too late, these winter legumes have to see too much of the warm spring weather when the ground cannot afford to have them taking up the room. Therefore, he has to plow them up before they have time to do the soil any good. The result is that much seed and work have been thrown away.

It takes a thick cover of winter legume vegetation about a foot deep to really do the soil any good. Blair says. The benefit from nitrogen and organic matter is directly proportional to the amount of material present under the soil. The practical minimum is about two or three inches high by April 1st. The same is true for vetch and crimson clover.

If you want a good winter legume crop it is time now to begin looking for your seed, says Blair. It will take 25 pounds per acre for Austrian winter peas, 25 pounds for vetch, and 25 pounds for crimson clover.

DON'T WALK ALL OVER TOWN LOOKING FOR BARGAINS

Local Soldier Among First 5th Army Troops To Enter Rome

Staff Sergeant Thomas Reynolds, of the Fifth Army in Italy, was a member of a tank reinforced 50th Infantry Division rifle company that was with the first Fifth Army troops to penetrate Rome.

With a coordinated tank and infantry attack, Reynolds and his squad helped clear Highway 6 leading into Rome of mines, pill boxes, anti-tank guns and other harassing fire. The infantrymen were commended by the tank commander for their fine work.

NEW CARBO AIR FLEET

Marking another triumph of American industrial genius as applied to air transportation, a fleet of all cargo planes, divided into sections for the most efficient loading of freight, will go into service this month on routes connecting big U. S. war centers. The planes have just been returned to private operation by the U. S. Army.

LONG ISLAND REPORTS TENSE EMPLOYMENT

Postwar employment in the aviation industry on Long Island, N. Y., will triple the prewar figures, according to a consensus of aeronautical manufacturers and others attending the quarterly meeting of the Long Island Association.

GRANDMOTHERS' SALARIES BUY BONDS FOR GRANDCHILDREN

Mrs. Elizabeth Taggart (left) and Mrs. Edna Hall

NEW YORK, N. Y. The slogan of the Grandmothers War Bond League, "Grandmother's Bond with the Future—War Bonds," is a common bond between two hard working grandmothers at the Aero Spark Plug Corporation in New York. Mrs. Elizabeth Taggart (left) and Mrs. Edna Hall (right) are the grandmothers who have bought part of their salaries in War Bonds every pay day.

Three-year-old grandson, John Taggart, is co-owner of the Bonds Mrs. Taggart buys to back her fighting husband's campaign, James Taggart.

Mrs. Hall's 16-month-old grand-daughter, Barbara Ann, receives War Bonds, also as part of her grandmother's "back the attack" program in honor of Barbara's Marine daddy, a master technical sergeant, the highest rank of an enlisted Marine. Mrs. Hall also has a son, Harvey, a Green Beret class in the Navy. Her last letter from him came from Guadalcanal.

In endorsing the Grandmothers League founded by Mrs. Marshall, wife of the General, Mrs. Hall agrees with Mrs. Taggart that "in buying Bonds with our grandchildren as co-owners, we have an emergency fund to use if necessary. But we don't expect that. We want the Bonds to be here for the children's education."

Agitation covers an area of more than a million miles.

Inadequate supplies of legume and grass seed are reported. Increased acreage in test crops, winter-planting of alfalfa and red clover, lack of labor, a brisk demand for hay, and the uncertainty of seed prices are some of the contributing factors.
