

Everyone Of You Won This VICTORY

Scarcely a man, woman or child in our town has failed to contribute in some way to this great Victory. For this has been a war of all the people, not just a war of armies and machines.

The homewife who saved her fats, the school-boy who collected scrap metal, the businessman who spent long hours on Civilian Defense—all of you have helped win this Victory.

Grandmothers who cooked for the USO, farmers who worked long, long hours short-handed to produce bumper crops—all of you in some manner have helped bring triumph to our Cause.

Men and women who have served their community and their nation on ration boards and draft boards without pay, folks who have gone around the town selling Bonds and Stamps at the end of a hard day's work. Canteen workers, Auxiliary Policemen and Firemen, First-Aid teachers — to you and you and you a nation's grateful thanks for pitching in.

But our greatest thanks go to our boys overseas and to you, their courageous mothers whose faith has never faltered though your hearts have been torn with anxiety.
