Senior Class Play To Be Presented At Central Auditorium On April 4

Central high school's Seniors are working steadily on their class play, INTRODUCIN' SUSAN.

This rollicking farce in three acts, written by Jay Tobias and produced by special arrangements with Eldridge Entertainment House, is directed by Mrs. Emma M. Crowe. The cast consists of seven men and five women.

The cast is headed by twelve ambitious seniors who are working unusually hard to make their play a great success.

Charles Mauney is the young college professor who is constantly in hot water because his wife, Anne Mayes, leaves him following a marital quarrel.

Johnny Kiser, a young football player, willingly agrees to pose as the professor's wife in order to make a personal gain. Barbara Gault, the sweetheart of the football player, becomes quite confused when she finds her young lover playing the wife in the professor's household.

Jack Still has the part of the professor's wife's "old flame". There is also another "old flame" sniping around the house. She is Melba Tindall, an old lover of the professor. Suzanne Arrowood plays the part of the laughable maid who always looks to her "little brother", Jim Crawford, for protection from all her boy friends.

Evelyn Cline plays the part of the professor's wealthy aunt who comes for a short visit. Decidedly opposed to divorce, the aunt becomes completely confused when she finds that her nephew has, not only a wife, but three.

Two attendants from the mental institution are played by Charles Painter and Reginald Murray. Paul McGinnis plays the part of the father of the professor's wife.

The play will be presented on the night of April 4, 1952. The time is eight o'clock. Tickets will be on sale beginning Friday, March 28. If you are looking for an evening of real entertainment and side-splitting fun, don't fail to see the Senior Class present INTRODUCIN' SUSAN.

No two railway conductors' ticket punches are exactly alike, each one is registered in the name of the conductor who uses it.
