College Students Take Tour

LAURINBURG — A group of more than 40 North Carolina State College seniors were guests of McNair's Yield-Tested Seed Company Thursday for its Annual Agronomy Farm tour.

The seniors, all majoring in Agronomy, spent half a day touring the vast McNair Farms in Scotland and Robeson counties. Visitors included Garland E. Still, Jr., Kings Mountain.

The farm tour began with an inspection of the Seed Company's large corn processing plant near Laurinburg where the group saw how hybrid seed corn was stored, treated, cleaned, graded, packed, and shipped to market.

The college seniors next visited McNair's experimental farm where they were shown latest tests being made with corn, tobacco, cotton, and other crops. Also shown were plant breeding experiments, fertilization practices, weed control, and irrigation tests.

The remainder of the afternoon consisted of visits to a large reclaimed ladino-fescue pasture grazing a herd of Hereford beef cattle; an anhydrous ammonia demonstration; and a large land clearing and reclamation project.

The final stop was at the Halbert Jones Farm in Robeson County where a farm overseer's cost accounting records and a demonstration of a complete farm unit was featured.

During their stay in Laurinburg, the seniors also visited the Dixie Guano Company plant and Laurinburg Milling Co.

Negro Wheat Field Is Community Pride

The crop pride of the Eagle Rock community of Wake County seems to be the Atlas wheat demonstration on the farm of Millard Perry, according to W. C. Davenport, Negro County agent for the Agricultural Extension Service.

Davenport says Perry, a young and progressive Negro farmer, decided to use both the better practices and varieties of wheat this year. The approximately four-acre plot stands uniform in growth with large heads on "just about every stalk in the field. Davenport says the crop is expected to be the best ever produced on the Perry farm, and perhaps the best ever produced in the entire community.

After a field meeting with other Negro farmers recently on the Perry farm, Davenport says it has been easy to get others to do a better job of growing wheat. Perry is president of the community Older Youth Club and the county Older Youth Council.

Performance-wise, Pontiac is second to none, with power to spare that whisks you through city traffic or cruises with remarkable economy. And Pontiac is a big car, with a long, 122-inch wheelbase.

But Pontiac's outstanding feature is its price—a price so low that if you can afford any new car you can afford a Pontiac. Come in and get the facts that prove that dollar for dollar you can't beat a Pontiac!
