VA Lists Rules For GI Veterans

Veterans Administration listed some common-sense rules that Korean GI Bill veteran - trainees and their schools and establishments can follow, in order to prevent delays in veterans' monthly GI allowance checks. They are:

First, both veterans and their schools should take a careful second look at the monthly certification of training they are required to send to VA after the end of every month of training completed.

They should make sure it has been completely filled out, and signed and dated both by the veteran and representative of his school. If VA gets an incomplete form, it has no choice but to return it—causing needless delays.

The law requires that VA receive these certifications, properly filled out, before a veteran may be paid his monthly allowance.

VA also urged that the certifications be sent in as soon after the end of the month as possible. If a certification arrives too late, the chances are that the veteran's check will be late.

Second, any changes in a veteran's training status should be reported to VA. Such a change, for example, would be his dropping courses so that he changes from a full-time to a part-time student.

A veteran's GI allowance is based, among other things, on the number of hours he spends in training each month. If his classroom time is cut down, and VA is not notified, there is a chance he would be paid too much for that month. Once VA learns of the fact, it would have no alternative but to collect the overpayment. Meantime, his checks would be delayed while matters were being straightened out.

Third, VA warned it cannot make any allowance payments, under the law, unless the training program a veteran is taking is the same as has been approved by his State Approving Agency. This provision has been placed

Accident Fatal To Gastonia Man

Cleveland county had its 14th highway fatality of the year Sunday night when Charlie Daniel Jamison, 30, Gastonia Negro, was instantly killed when the car he was driving turned over near the Midway service station on the Shelby-Kings Mountain highway about 11:30 o'clock.

Two other Gastonia Negroes, Sam Lowry and William Eugene Mobley were riding with him at the time of the accident. Mobley sustained lacerations and bruises but was dismissed from the Kings Mountain hospital after being given first aid.

According to Highway Patrolman C. D. Fortune, who investigated the wreck, Jamison was driving his car at a high rate of speed. He lost control of it on a curve and it turned over in the ditch crushing the driver's skull, Fortune said. Lowry was riding in the back seat and was uninjured.

U. S. producers have been marketing slaughter calves and cattle at a record rate since February. Marketings the first half of the year were up nearly 30 per cent from a year ago.
