

MRS. WOOD BOONE RAWLES

Miss Mary Joyce Johnston Weds Mr. Rawles In Home Ceremony

Miss Mary Joyce Johnston, of Shelby became the bride of Wood Boone Rawles of Kings Mountain in a charming home ceremony marked with simplicity and reverence at the home of the bride's parents on West Warren street at four-thirty o'clock in the afternoon on Saturday, August twenty-second.

The Reverend I. M. Brendle, pastor of Sulphur Springs Methodist church officiated with the impressive double ring service.

Simulated Altar
A simulated altar was created at the mantelpiece at the east end of the ceremony room for the exchange of vows. A peaked, oblong design of all-white asters and gladioli was posed on the center of the mantelpiece, reflecting in the gold-leaf mirror above, flanked by three branched crystal candleholders, completing the lovely setting. Pastel flowers, predominantly roses, were appointed elsewhere in the ceremony room, adding to the decor.

The Bride
The bridal couple entered the ceremony room and approached the altar together and unattended. The bride, a striking brunette, was beautiful in her chosen wedding ensemble. The slate blue street-length frock of pure silk faille was smartly fashioned with a portrait neckline modified with side points, the two points starred with large jeweled clusters in various shades of blue and the slim skirt was accented with mock-inverted pockets at the hipline. Her lattice cloche of navy blue velvet was embroidered with rhinestones and trimmed with noseveiling and her other accessories were also navy blue. Crescent earrings of variegated blue stones matching the clusters on her dress completed her costume and her flowers were arranged into a formal hand-bouquet with tuberoses and marine-encircling an all-white cymbidum.

The new Mrs. Rawles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gibson Johnston, also of Shelby, is a graduate of the Shelby High School and attended Anderson College, Anderson, South Carolina. For several years she has been associated with The Cleveland Times and is presently employed as advertising manager.
