Duke Official Addresses Lions

Conversion from coal to atomic fuel as a source of power for electricity would only make obsolete the boilers in use today, a Duke Power Company vice-president told members of the Kings Mountain Lions club Tuesday night.

Chuck Reed, Duke's rate engineer and a Matthew's dairyman, said he could only guess wildly concerning cost of conversion, date atomic electricity will be produced commercially, and cost of the lost facilities which conversion, "if it comes, would require."

"It's many years away, but atomic electricity is definitely in our thinking," he replied to a question put by Howard B. Jackson, in a post-address open forum.

Previously Mr. Reed had outlined Duke's phenomenal post-World War II growth and gave as a background what he termed phenomenal growth of the Duke area. He cited figures to show that the Charlotte area and Piedmont North Carolina, an area of about 20,000 square miles, had grown faster, outside of big cities, than comparable areas elsewhere in the Southeast.

"We like it that way," he noted, "for we prefer to serve a multiplicity of small towns and cities rather than concentrated big cities."

Mr. Reed illustrated his address with graphs and sketches which he said he had used last week before a group of bankers in New York, in support of a loan for $35,000,000 that Duke has just obtained for further expansion.

Other statements from Mr. Reed's address and answers to questions in the forum discussion:

The U. S. government spent $30,000,000 on one hydro plant, which army engineers had estimated would cost $27,000,000. "If Duke's engineers messed up like that, they'd be canned," he noted.

Duke's coal bill last year was $27,000,000.

Natural gas is not quite as efficient for producing electricity

Owner Demolishing Derelict Houses

Mrs. Love Ellis, owner of two derelict houses at the corner of Candler and King street, is demolishing the derelicts.

The city board of commissioners at a recent meeting had instructed the city attorney to take legal steps to have the houses demolished as a public hazard. Previously, Mrs. Ellis could not be located in New York where she resides.

Last week she telephoned City Hall and told city officials she had just learned of the action via a newspaper report and would be home over the weekend to attend to the work herself.

Under condemnation proceedings the city could have assessed the cost of the demolitions to the property.

Coe Is Jailed In Lieu Of Bond

A 29-year-old Kings Mountain man is being held in Cleveland County jail in Shelby in-lieu of $1500 bond on charges of assault with intent to kill.

Junior Coe, resident of Cherryville road here, was jailed Friday night and bond had not been made Wednesday afternoon.

The alleged assault occurred on N. Piedmont Avenue here Friday night about 9 o'clock when Coe's wife was allegedly pushed from the car operated by her husband.

Mrs. Coe was taken to Kings as is coal.

Air-conditioning and home-heating via electricity gives the electrical companies a load peak load and they seek less than any these types of business. However, Duke has a policy of giving the customer what he wants, he added, and does.

Due to sudden demand peaks, Miami electrical companies encourage their customers to buy oil heaters for heating purposes.

Duke is about twice the size of Carolina Power & Light Company.

Mr. Reed spoke on a program arranged by Tolly Shuford.

Mountain hospital where she was treated for head injuries sustained in the fall. She was discharged from the hospital Monday.

Police officers, who drew the warrant, said Coe was drinking at the time of the assault.
