Sandwiches Add Variety To Family Meal - Planning

Sandwiches can add more variety to your family meals than any one other single food. An estimated 90 million sandwiches are eaten every day in America—with peak consumption in late summer, says Ruby Uzzle, extension consumer marketing specialist at State College.

Sandwiches accommodate to the modern pattern of quick and easy living, for they provide endless nutritious variety to meals—the opportunity of eating favorite foods in easy-to-prepare, easy-to-eat form.

Mothers couldn't do without sandwiches when it comes to packing school lunches. They appeal to children, especially when something different is added or a "surprise" can be found. Sandwiches can be used to lure the children to the table at mealtime when they might otherwise refuse to eat.

Mrs. Uzzle recommends this "surprise sandwich" for children—and adults, too—to enjoy.

CREAM CHEESE SURPRISE SANDWICH

2 three-ounce packages cream cheese, softened

6 slices crisp bacon, crumbled

3/4 cup sliced stuffed olives

Add bacon and olives to cheese. Mix well. This mixture makes enough filling for four sandwiches.

Mrs. Uzzle emphasizes the fact that frozen sandwiches are ideal for quick picnic and lunch fare. You can prepare sandwiches for freezing in your spare time. One important thing to remember is to avoid use of mayonnaise or salad dressing in freezing as they separate and soak into the bread.
