

Unwanted Children May Become Adult Foundlings, Says Schwartz

Unwanted children of today may have unwanted mental problems of tomorrow and the "unwanted" are rich as well as poor. These are the observations of Dr. Emanuel K. Schwartz of the Postgraduate Center for Mental Health, a New York training center for psychiatrists and psychologists.

for dependent children have focused attention on the unwanted child. "But it is a grave error," Dr. Schwartz points out, "to believe that unwanted children are only poor kids in poor families. The 'unwanted' are found in large numbers among the affluent members of our society."

Dr. Schwartz believes that "unwanted children" represent a considerable portion of the future patients in our mental institutions. There is, he says, no substitute for parental love and care. Children who are deprived of such attention may be candidates for breakdowns in later years.

"While they may have nominal parents in childhood," Dr. Schwartz says, "unless they have a feeling of being loved and wanted, they can become adult foundlings."

"We find in our clinics at the Postgraduate Center that unwanted children are frequently unwanted children. Many parents, however nobly they try to conceal their feelings," says Dr. Schwartz, "unconsciously convey the 'unwantedness' to the child."

"But the traumatic effects are not limited to the children themselves," Dr. Schwartz points out. "Frequently," he added, "the mother and father, as well, are afflicted with emotional disturbances as the result of an unplanned addition to the family."

Says Dr. Schwartz: "In an age when science has given us the means for family planning, such as birth control pills and other forms of fertility regulation, it is

ENGLISH CHILDREN LEARN TO KNIT EARLY

Children in England learn to knit while in the first grade, according to Mrs. Ivy Strother, formerly of England and now a member of the Louisburg Home Demonstration Club.

Mrs. Frances Fuller, home economics agent, says Mrs. Strother is the Franklin County international relations chairman and has offered to continue teaching knitting—tying the classes into an international theme using patterns and wools from various countries. They have ordered sweater patterns from 24 countries.

AN ARTIST WITH SPLIT BASKETS

Mrs. Cicero Brovhill is an artist with oak split baskets. The Wilkes County woman has been incredible that we in the U.S. are still producing hundreds of thousands of unplanned and unwanted children.

making baskets for the Northwest Trading Post for many years, reports Mrs. Sue Beaver, home economics agent.

The baskets are all handmade. She gets the white oak wood and makes the ribs and splits with a small pocket knife. Mrs. Brovhill says, "It's just plain hard work."

HOUSING TOUR

Robeson County Home Demonstration house furnishings leaders recently toured furniture stores to learn principles of selecting furniture. Mrs. Helen Sampson, home economics agent, says emphasis was placed on the study of woods, finishes, and ornamental touches.

Each house furnishings leader has been asked to refinish one old piece of furniture to use as a teaching aid in her club.

SPENDING YOUR CLOTHING DOLLAR

How do you spend your clothing dollar? Mrs. George Gilbert of Moyock, says she has realized a savings of $2 to $25 on garments such as blouses and lined skirts and dresses by making them herself.

Mrs. Kay Griffin, assistant home economics agent in Currituck County, says Mrs. Gilbert has found from a study of fabrics that she must observe fabrics closely and choose wisely.

HOUSING SCHOOL

An educational housing program is underway in Gaston County. Miss Alice Bennett, assistant home economics agent, says young couples, who are planning to build within 12 months, are being invited to attend the classes.

Miss Bennett says the series of classes will cover all phases of housing needs.

SPECIAL SERVICE PROJECT

After observing her two boys' creative play with blocks, Mrs. Wayne Pendergrass suggested to members of the Carson Home Demonstration Club that they make blocks for the children in the school for retarded in Morganton.

They sanded and refinished wooden blocks with a penetrating seal which made them washable. "Decals and original drawings of comic strip characters were used on the blocks," reports Mrs. Florence Sherrill, home economics agent in Macon County.
