

"Horn In West" Now Famous For Battle Scene

Boone, N. C. — The Outdoor Drama "Horn in the West" has become quite famous for its authentic battle scenes and exciting Indian fire dances. A new thrill, however, is in the show this year. Recent publicity about Polly, the "Nag" which leads the pioneers to Hillsboro in the big Exodus scene, has gone to her lovely caretaker Mrs. Ginger Nowell in the face. The horse twisted around so violently that while still in her traces she was facing the wagon. Most of the pioneer actors were in the precarious position of kneeling while the actor playing the Preacher Sims role was praying. The actor who plays the hero in the show was also the real hero of the evening. Dr. Stuart enacted by Bill Ross quietly but quickly grabbed Polly's bride, and talked to her soothingly until the scene ended and the technical crew took over. The next evening the husband of the hero's handler, Tom Nowell, maste, of properties, dressed as a pioneer and assisted his wife in leading the horse and wagon on stage. Again "Polly" reared and "Preacher Sims" played by Charlie Elledge saved the day by bellowing forth, "Get that wild horse out of her, Hank, 'fore she kills somebody. She's mad cause she lost her colt." Nowell, picking up the cue, replied, "All Right, Preacher," and led Polly off stage slightly ahead of schedule.

The next evening the company prepared for the worst. When the settlers knelt in the prayer scene, not all prayers were made believe. On this night Polly was led by a stranger to the footlights, Hagan King, the company's Chief Carpenter for ten years and one of the huskier members of the cast. King usually works back stage building, repairing, pulling, and showing scenery, but on this evening he became a pioneer actor. Covering all possibilities Bud Mayes 230-pound understudy to Preacher Sims, silently took his place immediately behind Polly. Sure enough, right in the middle of the prayer, Polly again reared. She barely got off the ground when King forcefully pulled her down. At the same time Mayes slapped her on the rump resoundingly. After the prayer, a calm and peaceful Polly led the pioneers off stage and on to Hillsboro.

There are many fine youth programs in today's agriculture which should result in providing future leadership in a basic industry which is ever changing and becoming more and more complex. The 4-H program is most likely best known to you. However, there are certain phases of the larger 4-H program which you may not know about. One of these deals with the production and marketing of fruits and vegetables.

each participant must organize his or her thoughts well and present material in a logical manner. Timing is also important. Perhaps one of the most valuable phases of the program is the opportunity to meet other contestants, see their demonstrations and pick up new ideas.

I wonder sometimes if we really appreciate just what this training program means to our boys and girls and how many people are involved in it. The program on the county level, the boy or girl is selected and trained by the extension chairman, or his assistants, or the home demonstration agent and her assistants.

Right now I cannot think of anything more important than these youth programs in orienting our young people in the direction of useful and productive lives.

It is a good opportunity for all organizations, both inside and outside the field of agriculture, to sponsor programs of real value.

You might speak to your county extension chairman and find out how you, or the organization you represent, might help.

Nocturnal Chomping

A London doctor says "binge eating"—especially at night—is a frequent cause of overweight. He cited the case of a compulsive eater who made the rounds every night eating all the candy he could find in vending machines. When his weight reached 560 pounds he went to the doctor and, after treatment, managed to work down to a "lightweight" 252 pounds. Which just goes to
