YANKS IN GEORGIA

The town of Fitzgerald in southern Georgia was established primarily by northern soldiers after the Civil War because of a special offer made by the state. Land was offered at a low price to encourage the veterans to settle in the area and more than 50,000 acres was purchased. One-fifth of this acreage was used to establish the town. Many streets are named for northern generals.

The number of seats in a boat does not indicate the passenger capacity. Boats should not be over-loaded.
