Continued From Front Page olina fund backing for a local experiment in breaking the poverty cycle. They are B. N. Barnes, Lee C. Phoenix, and Malcolm Brown, the county's three schools superintendents; County Manager Joe Hendrick; Shelby City Manager Phin Horton and Kings Mountain Mayor John Henry Moss. Other executive board members are U. S. Hamilton of Boiling Springs, Carl Dockery of Shelby, Robert Kilgore of Kings Mountain, and Flay Willis of Lawndale. Jonas Bridges was chairman of the nominating committee. By-laws of the community action group will be drawn up by the executive committee, which also will appoint sub-committees. Fifty members of the 81-member board of directors of the Cleveland County committee attended Thursday's meeting. Phin Horton, who presided, noted that CAGO's bid for a community services consultant resulted in the assignment of George Newman, a state welfare department employee, to this county. Newman described the variety of poverty - fighting programs which came into existence with the establishment of the federal Office of Economic Opportunity such as; job corps for 16-21 year olds; work training program in the schools; work study program for college-age students; pre-school programs; health programs; vocational rehabilitation; home management; remedial and non-curricula education; day care centers; adult basic education; small business loans; assistance to farmers and many others. A county must have an action committee before it can apply for these programs. Newman noted, adding that $250,000 is available this year, 1/3 of which is to be allotted pre-school and school programs and 1/3 for health purposes. Newman said "Our citizens must be informed of what help is available on the local, state and federal levels. He also noted that "many in the county are not aware of help already available to them through established agencies."

"It is no easy task to break the cycle of poverty, but we can try", Newman, a county employee since July, said. PRESBYTERIAN Dr. Paul Ausley's sermon topic Sunday morning at First Presbyterian church will be, "Key To God's Blessings."

TO CONVENTION Mayor and Mrs. John Henry Moss, Commissioner and Mrs. Ray Cline, Commissioner and Mrs. Norman King, and City Clerk Joe McDaniel will attend the annual meeting of the North Carolina League of Municipalities beginning Thursday. Kings Mountain area citizens gave 238 pints of blood at Monday's visit of the Red Cross bloodmobile. Goal for the one-day collection was 250 pints of blood and the estimated guess of 300 pints made by volunteer workers early in the day would have been met had there not been a total of 53 rejections.

Bennett, six gallon donor; Grady Howard, five gallon donor; Robert Lee Wilson, Thelma Dellinger and Charles E. Ballard, four gallon donors; Gaither W. Ledbetter and Azri J. Jamerson, three gallon donors; J. D. Bridges and James E. Amos, two gallon donors; and Verlee Roberts, Sylvia Franklin, Elizabeth Rayfield and Albert A. Allran, new one gallon club members.

Blood Program Chairman W. Skellie Hunt expressed himself as "highly pleased" at the response to the call for blood, stating that he appreciated the work done by many people in the success of another record in giving by blood of No. 4 Township people.

Rotary Needs Name Of Area Serviceman

Sending Christmas greetings to those serving their country in Vietnam and other overseas installations was enthusiastically endorsed by the Rotary club of Kings Mountain at their last meeting. The Rotary Club wants to send each person from the Kings Mountain area a Christmas greeting. These greetings "will be an expression of gratitude and deep appreciation for their sacrifice and struggle for a free world," a local Rotarian said.

In order to do this, they need the names and addresses of those who are serving in an overseas assignment. If someone in your family, or a neighbor, is serving overseas, please contact one of the following: Devere R. Smith, 701 Maner Road, 739-2212; Robert H. Goforth, 305 West Gold Street, 739-2967; Rev. The Tularemia bacterium needs no wound or break in the skin for entry into the body, as it is able to go through apparently healthy skin. Infection may result from rubbing the eyes with contaminated fingers, by eating wild animal meat which is inadequately cooked, or by drinking from a contaminated stream. Bloodsucking insects can also pass it on. A most frequent story given by the Tularemia patient, though, is that he had cleaned a wild rabbit several days before he became sick. He might have punctured his blood-smeared hand with a shiver of bone. He might have rubbed the blood into his eyes. Or he might not have cooked the meat thoroughly. Symptoms begin two to seven days following infection. The illness has a rapid onset, accompanied by chills, fever, headache, vomiting, body pains, sweating and prostration. It resembles typhoid fever and can necessitate a recovery period of up to six months. Farmers, hunters, trappers and their wives should know how to protect themselves. They should avoid taking animals that appear sluggish, as this could indicate that the animal has Tularemia. They should clean wild game with caution, keeping hands away from the eyes. Rubber or plastic gloves help protect hands. Any game having white or yellow spots on the liver or other viscera, or having enlarged glands in the neck, should be burned or buried. The bite of bloodsucking insects should be avoided. All wild game should be cooked thoroughly. The drinking of raw water should be avoided. The precautions listed here could do much to prevent an unfortunate ending to many of the hunting trips this fall. Tularemia might provide such an ending.

Fast mail service between England and America, using steam instead of sail boats, was conceived by Sir Samuel Cunard, an English shipowner. He was awarded a contract and promptly purchased four steamers. The first trip between Liverpool and Boston, took 15 days. Jamaica has mountains as well as beaches. Health And Safety Tips

Old King Cold is a tough character, says a pamphlet of the American Medical Association. So far, medical science has not been able to break through his guard. Gradually, however, more and more is being learned about colds and their causes even though up to now colds can't be prevented or cured. All that can be hoped for is to treat the symptoms of the cold to make one feel better until it goes away, and to be as careful as possible not to spread your infection to others.

A number of viruses produce the symptoms that most of us call a cold, possibly as many as a hundred. The true cold is an infection with one or more viruses. Bacteria are believed to be purely secondary infectors. Current research seems to indicate that colds are harder to spread than has been thought. Fresh colds appear to be more contagious than older ones. Children's colds have been shown to be more contagious than those of adults. There still is much discussion among experts as to the relationship of becoming chilled, or damp to "catching" cold.

What to do for a cold? Medical science can't help much. No specific treatment, so far available, is effective against the cold virus. Any treatment is directed toward relief of the discomfort of runny nose, watering eyes, sore throat, slight fever and the other symptoms of the cold. The wonder drugs, such as penicillin, don't bother the viruses, but may be prescribed by your physician for secondary bacterial infections. Bed rest, or at least inactivity, is helpful. Your physician may suggest mild medication to help allay the discomfort. Cold vaccines thus far are of little value. Evidence is lacking that any particular foods, vitamin supplements, special clothing or exposure to sunlight or fresh air have any effect on colds. If a cold persists or seems unusually severe, see your doctor. Colds are great imitators and the early symptoms can mimic those of other much more serious infections. Recurring colds may not be colds at all, but may be allergic attacks that require medical attention.

VA Questions And Answers

Q—I am over 65 and still working and earning too much to draw monthly benefits. Would it be of my advantage to file an application for benefits now?

A—All workers 65 and over and still working should certainly file an application as soon as possible. Even though monthly payments may not be payable immediately, this action would establish entitlement to hospital benefits (medicare) when that part of the program becomes effective July 1, 1966.

Q—I am acquainted with several elderly people, all over age 65, living in my community. None of them could qualify for monthly social security benefits. Can such people qualify for the new hospital benefits?

A—Yes, they certainly can. However, they must file an application with the social security office in order to establish their entitlement to hospital benefits. Inform such people to contact their nearest social security office as soon as possible.

Q—I have several questions regarding the social security program, but work all day. What would be the best way to have my questions answered?

A—The social security office in Gastonia will remain open until 8:45 a.m. each Thursday night for the next several months. Any one desiring to file a claim or secure information about any part of the program is welcomed to visit the office on any Thursday evening.

Q—Recently I heard that a widow could start drawing social security benefits at age 60 on her deceased husband's wage record. Has the age for widows drawing social security been lowered?

A—One of the 1965 changes to the law does permit widows to start drawing benefits at age 60 at a reduced amount. If a widow elects to take benefits at age 60 she will receive about 15% less than waiting until she's 62. However, keep in mind that if reduced benefits are elected, 24 checks could be received before reaching age 62. If you are a widow between age 60 and 62, contact your nearest social security office and discuss this matter.
