GROUP TOURS REMODELED HOME... seeing something often proves to be a more effective teaching aid than just hating about it.

Members of the touring group observed the color scheme which was planned and coordinated throughout the home, the choice of accessories, the workable U-shaped kitchen, and the refinished furniture.

SMALL ELECTRICAL APPLIANCES Many small appliances have been added to the home in recent years. Homemakers need the knowledge and skill in using and caring for the appliances in order to prolong the life of the appliances and also utilize them as time and energy savers.

Miss Martha Edmondson, home economics Extension agent, says the home management leaders in Durham County have been giving a program on small appliances at their club meetings.

SEWING CLASS BEGINS If you are going to sew, you should do a good job of it. Miss Nelda Howell, home economics Extension agent in Craven County, believes you should practice good sewing methods.

That is the reason she visited a local department store to inform the homemakers of the educational services offered by the Agricultural Extension Service. As a result of the interest shown by the shoppers, a beginners sewing class has been filled and many are on a waiting list.

DO-IT-YOURSELF PROJECT The Mills River Community members decided it was time to do something about beautifying their school.

So Mrs. Blanche Phillips and several other ladies started a do-it-yourself project. Miss Wanda Winecoff, assistant home economics agent, says the Henderson County group met at the school and made draperies for the school library. Plans are now being made to beautify the school grounds.

EXHIBIT WINS FIRST PLACE "Don't Discard, But Work Hard" was the theme of the Currituck County educational booth at the Five-County Albemarle Fair this year. Mrs. E. R. Woodard, Mrs. Paul Spry and Mrs.

Lee Market planned the exhibit which won first place.

Mrs. Elizabeth Sanderlin, home economics Extension agent, says that under the sign "don't discard" was old furniture such as a broken chair, bread tray, sugar bucket and old clothes used in braided rugs. Under the sign "work hard" was a refinished wash stand, bread tray, picture, chair, and a braided rug.

FIRST-AID FOR FURNITURE Are you bothered by scratches or spots and stains on your wood furniture? If so, you probably need a first-aid course on furniture care.

Miss Harriet Tutterow, home economics Extension agent in Caldwell County, says there are two main rules to remember when repairing furniture: always remove wax from the area to be repaired and always work with the grain of the wood.

MEETING HAS INTERNATIONAL FLAVOR Food was delicious and the costumes were unusual at the meeting of the Old Sparta Home Demonstration Club. The international relations chairman requested several months ago that each club member study a different country.

Mrs. Eugenia P. VanLandingham, Edgecombe County's home economics agent, reports that at a recent club meeting each member dressed in a costume and prepared a food dish typical of her assigned country. They also gave a short sketch of life in the countries.

HELPFUL HINT If you are one of the persons who finds it necessary to hang some of the laundry in the bathroom, you may find this "hint" helpful, reports Mrs. Martha Adams, home economics agent.

A Richmond County homemaker, Mrs. C. R. Williams, Jr., suggests a simple portable clothes line for use over the bathtub. Using screen door hooks, attach an "eye" to the wall at each end of the tub. Tie the hooks to each end of the clothes line, cut to fit between the eyes. The line may be hooked into place, or stored when not in use.

CONSUMER MARKETING PROBLEMS What are some of the main factors affecting our choice of food? The desirability for knowing quality and being able to judge quality convenience food is important. Mrs. Martha Thompson, home economics agent, says Davidson County homemakers have been studying ways of becoming informed consumers.

With around 7,000 items on the grocery store shelves, the homemaker has to keep up-to-date on new food products, believes Mrs.

DEALING WITH TENSION "The ability to overcome obstacles and withstand frustration... spring from a capacity to accept normal amounts of stress with some ability to rebound or handle trouble."

EDUCATIONAL SERVICES OFFERED With a growing interest in home sewing, the Extension home economics agents in Craven County offered some helpful hints for home seamstresses in one of the local department stores.
