Living To A Grand, Old Age Has Its Rewards And Hazards

RALEIGH — Living to a grand old age has its rewards, but it also has its hazards. Elderly persons have more than their share of accidents and the accidents they have are apt to be serious. Since many accidents happen in the home, North Carolina State extension home economics specialists suggest you make your home as safe as possible for senior citizens.

You'll need to take into consideration the special factors that make older persons accident-prone, the specialists observe.

Most older persons do not see and hear so well as they did when they were younger. Their ability to recognize, understand, and judge a dangerous situation may have slowed down. Even if sight and judgment have remained near normal, the sheer physical ability to react with speed and vigor is usually less.

Anyone who cannot see well, is more likely to trip and fall. Keep stairways well-lighted and free from toys or other objects that a person could trip over. Throw rugs should be well anchored. Wipe up all spills so floors won't be slippery.

Medicines can be a hazard. It is easy to get the wrong medicine, especially at night. One way to be sure a person gets the right medicine is to fasten a bit of sandpaper on bottles of medicine that should not be taken internally. The sandpaper will be a warning a person can feel when he touches the bottle.

To eliminate unnecessary climbing and bending, provide storage areas for personal items and household articles within easy reach. For senior citizens, easy-to-reach areas are between hip and eye level.

By going over your house and removing all safety hazards, you'll do your part to insure the senior citizen's safety, the specialists note.

"Pinocchio" Opens April 7 In Charlotte

CHARLOTTE, N. C. — "Pinocchio," the Broadway musical for children will return to Owens Auditorium for a two day run on April 7 and 8. Five performances will be given, performances on April 7 at 4 and 7 p.m., April 8 at 1:30, 4:00 and 7 p.m.

The adventure story, enacted by 102 life-size marionettes opens with a scene in Papa Geppetto's Topshop, where the lonely old toymaker and his dog, Koko, admire the big new puppet he has just completed.

After Papa Geppetto and Koko go to bed the Blue Fairy appears and brings Pinocchio to life. She cautions him that although he can move and speak like a real boy, he will not be a real boy until he learns the importance of always telling the truth, keeping promises, being brave and going to school. To help him celebrate, she also brings to life the other toys in the shop until the rooster crows to mark the dawn.

The "coming out party" production number features three jacks in the boxes, a four piece clown band, a squad of toy soldiers, a roller skating clown, the delightful Calico dancing elephant and the purple ostrich ballerina. The rooster crows, the Tickets may be obtained from the Coliseum Box Office or ordered by mail. Group rates are extended to Scouts, Churches and clubs by contacting the box office.

Pvt. W. H. James Completes Course

FORT DIX, N. J. (AHTNC) — Pvt. William H. James, whose wife, Jeanette, lives at 311 W. Gold St., Kings Mountain, N. C., completed a vehicle mechanic course at the Army Training Center here March 11.

During the eight-week course, James learned the fundamentals of internal combustion engines and wheeled vehicle chassis components.

The 23-year-old soldier, son of Mr. and Mrs. England James, Route 1, Bessemer City, entered the Army in November 1965 and completed basic training at Fort Gordon, Ga.

He was graduated from Tryon High School in 1961 and was employed by Firestone Textiles, Gastonia, before entering the Army.
