

G-W Yearbook Is Dedicated To Spangler

BOILING SPRINGS—The 1966 Anchor, Gardner-Webb College's yearbook, was dedicated Wednesday to R. Patrick Spangler of Shelby, a trustee and supporter of the college.

The Shelby businessman and vice-chairman of the state's Conservation and Development Board, received a standing ovation from the student body as he walked forward to receive the book from Sandra Honeycutt, editor.

"This is one of the greatest things which has ever happened to me—especially since it comes from you—the students," said Spangler. He went on to reemphasize his desire to see a four-year college at Gardner-Webb and also to pledge the erection of an auditorium.

Reference to the auditorium was due to the assembly being held in the Best Physical Education Building. This facility was not constructed to serve as an assembly building but is the only structure on campus which will accommodate the entire student body for meetings of this type.

Dedication of the 176-page book was made to Spangler on the basis of his work for the college during the past two years as national general chairman of its successful fund drive. Miss Honeycutt, who is from Harrisburg, in making the dedication said, "This has been an exceptional year. The more thoughtful of our students have felt the quickening pulse of Gardner-Webb and gloried in its advancement and its bright future. So much is owed to a devoted leader of the college that this year we take an exceptional step outside the college family to make this dedication.

"To R. Patrick Spangler we dedicate this book in the hope that it portrays well that exceptional year 1965-1966 when Gardner-Webb launched into a new era of growth and advancement.

"It is impossible to list his deeds, his work and his dedication to the continued progress of those things which we have come to love. His record of personally raising over $1 million for the school and serving as national general chairman of the campaign which has passed the $2,625,000 mark will stand in history as a turning point for Gardner-Webb.

"R. Patrick Spangler has given his time free and freely. His family, his business, his work in civic areas and his duties as vice-chairman of the state's Conservation and Development Board must have suffered due to his devotion to the college.

"For this and much more we return to you our pledge to continue in life those principles you revealed to us—not only through words but also through action."

Spangler and his brother, E. W. (Bud) Spangler operated Spangler and Sons Concrete Co. of Shelby. Spangler Ready Mix Concrete Co. in Kings Mountain and the Shelby Sand and Stone Co., Inc. of Shelby. They have named the college's new stadium in honor of their mother, Mrs. Vernie Patrick Spangler and in memory of their father, Earnest Webb Spangler.

Students received their annuals following the dedication.

Houston is seeking the Republican and Democratic conventions in 1968.

Jarring Heart Disease Facts Say Timothy Tarheel Apathetic

CHAPEL HILL — The North Carolina Heart Association puts its cards right on your table, Timothy Tarheel—and the cards are all hearts. One of the hearts is yours.

February is the shortest month of the year—but during its 28 days more North Carolinians died of heart and blood vessel disease than will die in auto wrecks throughout the 365 days of 1966. More North Carolinians die of heart and blood vessel disease during the first four months of the year than will die during the entire year because of cancer. Many people usually don't let such statistics "bother" them. This is so because statistics usually don't have "flesh and bone" on them, and statistics have a way of sounding as if they apply only to the next guy. You're the next guy to the next guy.

Heart and blood vessel diseases statistics get closer to home, the state heart disease control agency says, because at present death rates, more than half of all living North Carolinians will eventually die from this leading cause of premature death. Unless, of course, heart researchers come up with some answers in the meantime... and unless the new knowledge is put to work.

The state Heart Association doesn't bandy with these statistics lightly. First, of all, the agency doesn't want to scare anyone into a heart attack—nor does it wish to provide North Carolinians with imagined ailments—nor does it believe that the average North Carolinian is not already aware that heart disease is a major health problem.

However, heart researchers have found that thousands of heart disease fatalities could have been prevented—and millions of premature heart disease casualties in the future can be prevented if folks would only pay a bit more attention to their heart health.

Timothy Tarheel, the odds are that the heart disease statistics apply to you—and early recognition of heart attack risk factors, for example, might very well prolong your life.

Sometimes, North Carolina Heart Association leaders have the feeling that they're talking only for their own health—when they're really talking for yours. (Timothy Tarheel, however good-hearted he may be in his support of heart research, seems to keep right on thinking that the statistics do not apply to him.) Statistics do count, and heart disease's premature death toll counts up.

Those deaths, like the less frequent but equally appalling motor vehicle death, might have been prevented. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure—but neither prevention nor cure can really be measured in economic and human terms and, measurable or not, prevention is serious business.

For information about heart disease risk factors, write HEART, Chapel Hill, North Carolina. And remember, Timothy Tarheel, being informed is only the first step. What you do with that information is a matter of life and death.

Statistically, it is a matter of life. It is a matter of life for you and the other guy.
