John W. Etters

I am a member of a state-wide committee, the purpose of which is to advise concerning the building of a curriculum in ornamental horticulture technology. This is just one of many curricula available to students who are enrolled in one of the community colleges now operating in North Carolina.

I was quite hazy about the aims, objectives and organization of the community college system until these points were explained to me at our first meeting.

Basically, the system is composed of three divisions, all complementing each otner: comprehensive community colleges, technical institutes and industrial education centers.

It seems to me that the challenge facing the community colleges in North Carolina is staggering. As I told our advisory group, the success of this program will demand the best of the best from the standpoint of counseling, curriculum building and instruction at all levels of responsibility.

Here we are dealing with a segment of our citizenship which might be referred to as the forgotten ones. There is something for every boy and girl, man and woman who is willing to put forth the effort—a program of social and economic recovery.

Find out all you can about your community colleges because they may help you, your son, your daughter, or a friend. . . .

"In the spring a young man's fancy . . ."; and I might say, too, so does a fisherman's. The young man's enthusiasm might wane a little but a fisherman's never does.

Two weeks ago I caught a bream that weighed 16 ozs. Any bream fisherman will tell you what a thrill it is to have one this size on the end of a fly-line.

What I am leading up to is the sharing with you of a card given to me last week by a friend who heads a large tree expert organization in the Piedmont. The title—"When Fishermen Meet."

"Hiyamac! Lobuddy. Bnearlong? Coplours. Ketchenney? Goddafew. Kindarthay? Bassencarp. Ennysizetoom? Cuplapouns. Hittenhard? Sordalike. Whatchaoozin? Gobbaworms. Fishinonaboddum? Hydinonaboddum. Igaddago. Tubad. Seeyaroun. Yeahtakideezy. Guluk and a happiday."
