The Veterans Corner

EDITOR'S NOTE: Below are authoritative answers by the Veterans Administration to some of the many current questions from former servicemen and their families. Further information on veterans benefits may be obtained at any VA office.

Q—I am a Viet-Nam Era veteran, married, and plan to take college courses under the new G. I. Bill. I know the educational allowance for a veteran with one dependent is $155 a month for full time enrollment, $115 for three-quarter time, and $75 for half time in college. But how many semester hours are required in these classifications?

A—Full time college training means 14 or more semester hours or the equivalent; three-quarter time training consists of 10 to 13 semester hours; and half-time is 7 to 9 semester hours of college courses or the equivalent.

Q—I understand most VA benefits are tax exempt and do not need to be reported as income. Is there any VA derived income that a veteran must report as taxable income?

A—Yes. A veteran who holds a G. I. insurance participating policy and has left his dividends on deposit with the VA has a source of income in the interest that these dividends are drawing. This must be reported as income. The dividends themselves, however, are tax free and need not be reported as income.

Q—As a widow of a retired officer, I am drawing a portion of my husband's retirement pay for my five children under the Servicemen's Family Protection Program. Does this preclude my children's receiving a survivors pension allowance from the VA and college educational assistance under the Orphans Educational Assistance program?

A—Four children may receive pension payments from the VA and may continue to receive them while attending college. But the fact that they are receiving pension indicates your husband did not die from service-connected causes, so the children are not eligible for the Orphans Educational Assistance program.

In 1967, 53.24% of all deaths reported in North Carolina were attributable to cardiovascular renal diseases, says the North Carolina Heart Association.
