A regular spray and/or dust program is the best insurance you have to protect your plants from the ravages of insect and disease pests.

It is not possible to have roses, for example, with perfect foliage and flowers or undamaged vegetables (beans, tomatoes, sweet corn, etc.) unless you do follow a regular schedule.

You will remember that we have two general classes of insects: those that chew their food and require what we term a stomach poison; and those that have sucking mouth parts, requiring a contact poison.

By comparison, the chewing insects are more easily controlled than the sucking because you can see evidence of damage. When this is discovered any good stomach poison will knock them out.

On the other hand, the sucking insects are sneaky and you may have severe foliage injury before you know it. Aphids, spider mites and lacebugs are the worst offenders in this group. Again, they like to bask in the shade of a leaf (underside) and siphon the delectable juices from the plant parts, much like you would enjoy a chocolate milk shake or a cool lemonade through a straw while resting under the shade of the old apple tree. Don't forget, they are "sneaky." Why not buy an inexpensive hand lens so you can see what's crawling.

spray must cover the body of the insect and clog his respiratory system if it is to be effective; thus the importance of thoroughly spraying or dusting the undersides of the leaves.

There are so many effective chemical formulations on the market that to name them would be impractical. Some control only sucking insects; others only chewing insects; while some formulations are effective against both types. Then, too, formulations are available which combine chemicals for the control of both insects and diseases — all purpose rose sprays and dusts are examples.

The important thing, it seems to me, is to go to your garden supply dealer, tell him your troubles, then read, carefully, the instructions for proper use on the container.

Adjust your tri-focals so that you will not overlook the fine print.

we care

why should we guarantee other people's products?

If we didn't, we couldn't honestly say WE CARE. Could we?

You see, before any product is allowed on our shelves, we've checked it out pretty carefully.

We've checked the company that makes it.

We've checked to be sure the product is all the package says it is.

If you ever buy anything at A&P you're not happy with, you don't have to bother to write a letter to the company that made it.

Just tell your A&P store manager.

He'll give you your money back.

We'll get in touch with that company for you...and for us.

That's A&P's guarantee. No matter who makes it, if A&P sells it, A&P guarantees it.

Not every store can offer you a guarantee like that.

A&P can...and does.

Shouldn't A&P be your store?
