Let's think together a little about your local florist. He is a businessman and an asset to the community he serves so well. His business operations, greenhouses and retail shop, require high initial investments and tremendous overhead costs, especially in his greenhouses where he must keep every square foot of space producing at maximum efficiency, if he expects to stay in business.

In the greenhouse, too, he must employ highly trained supervisors and assistants with special skills. In his retail shop, competence is required in the art of floral designing and arranging. This is not only a highly specialized business but one that is also highly competitive.

I expect that if we wanted to establish a standard of excellence for quality products, along with Mrs. J. W. Bell.

These are some of the facts well known to me due to my long association with the industry in research, teaching and extension. Now let's consider one man's opinion as related to "please omit flowers" at funerals. This was written by The Reverend W. Carter Marbreier, pastor of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church in Philadelphia. In 1958 he was voted the "Outstanding Young Man of the Year" for both the City of Philadelphia and the State of Pennsylvania. Here it is:

"PLEASE SEND THE PASTOR FLOWERS" "Don't paste my casket with certificates for charities, and professional chair-endowments, and the hundred-and-one-do-gooder agencies ghou-ishly squeezing through the door of the funeral parlor for a hand-out. If you are going to be big-hearted...do it on your own time...and don't wait for death to open up your heart to the needy and the sick. I believe flowers are proper and right at the time of death, beautifully symbolic of the brief human life, grown by God and thereby so precious to Him, even at its fading. So, no matter what others may say, send ME flowers. And don't use my last mortal remains as a charity income tax deduction."

Fun loving Shriners take great pride in their colorful parades. The first Shrine parade was held in Baltimore in 1884 and the first national parade was held in Omaha in 1892.

Fellowship is one of the Shrine principles. The Shrine provides the means to widen the fellowship that was first enjoyed in the Masonic Lodges. It offers companionship with others of similar tastes, interests and values and provides close association with men who are leaders in all walks of life.

20,000 Farmers Are Expected For Convention

Over 20,000 top farmers and agri-businessmen are expected in Raleigh on January 22 and 23 for the third Farm Materials Handling Exposition.

Sponsored by North Carolina State University and the electric power suppliers of the state, the exposition will feature the latest ideas in farmstead mechanization.

More than 40 companies will display equipment, according to Howard Ellis, extension agricultural engineer at NCSU and general manager of the event.

"We are concentrating on new labor-saving and cost-saving equipment and systems," Ellis explained. "All the exhibits will be manned by people who are knowledgeable of farm problems."

Similar expositions were held in Richmond, Va., in 1968. All were regarded as highly successful.

The Exposition will be held at Dorton Arena on the N. C. State Fairgrounds.

Dairymen and beef producers will get a chance to see and compare equipment that permits the full mechanization of silage feeding. Pork producers can see a full line of swine equipment, including such things as farrowing stalls, feeders, waterers and related equipment. Tobacco growers can see the latest bulk curing equipment.

Along with featuring equipment for producers of specific farm commodities, the Exposition will have many displays of interest to all farmers. Included will be buildings, building materials, motors and other electrical equipment, manure disposal systems, loading and conveying equipment, and irrigation systems.

Commissioner of Agriculture James A. Graham has called the Exposition an "important public service."

Dr. H. Brooks James, dean of agriculture and life sciences at NCSU, noted that farmstead mechanization in agriculture has lagged behind field mechanization. He added that both types of mechanization are needed for a progressive agriculture.

The official opening of the Exposition will be 9:30 a.m. on Wednesday, Jan. 22. Closing time will be 5:30 p.m. The same schedule will be maintained on the second day of the Exposition, Thursday, Jan. 23. Admission is free and parking space is plentiful at Dorton Arena.

Blueberries Council Subject

Blueberries will be the topic of the day at the second annual open house of the Southeastern Blueberry Council at Wallace on Jan. 23.

The Thursday meeting, co-sponsored by the Southeastern Blueberry Council and the Agricultural Extension Service at North Carolina State University, will begin at 9:45 a.m. at the American Legion Post at Wallace.

Joe Brooks, extension horticultural specialist at North Carolina State University, said anyone interested in the production of blueberries or in the blueberry industry "is cordially invited to attend."

A wide variety of production subjects will be discussed. Some of these are blueberry varieties, research and extension blueberry programs at N. C. State, grades and standards, and insects.

Phil Sheridan, executive secretary of the North American Blueberry Council, will be on the program to discuss the activities of the North American Blueberry Council.

Nazarene church pastors and their wives in this area will take part in the annual North Carolina district preachers conference to be held at the First Church of the Nazarene in Concord on Monday through Wednesday, February 3-5.

Nearly all of the 49 churches on the district are scheduled to be represented.

Guest speakers will be Dr. V. H. Lewis, Kansas City, Mo., chairman of the Board of General Superintendents of the denomination, and the Rev. Marion McCandless, pastor of the Nazarene church in Midway City, Calif., formerly of Georgia and Alabama districts.

Dr. V.H. Lewis is a former secretary of the Department of Evangelism and once was superintendent of the Houston district. He is serving his third 4-year term in the highest elective office of the denomination.

The program will be in charge of the Rev. T. C. Sanders, Jr., Charlotte, district superintendent. The Rev. George Privett Jr., is pastor of the host church.

The official opening of the Exposition will be 9:30 a.m. on Wednesday, Jan. 22. Closing time will be 5:30 p.m. The same schedule will be maintained on the second day of the Exposition, Thursday, Jan. 23. Admission is free and parking space is plentiful at Dorton Arena.
