Weekly Health Tip

By WILSON GRIFFIN

Children living with an adult who smokes were sick more frequently than youngsters who live in homes of non-smokers, reports the research team of Dr. Paul D. Cameron of Detroit. The study was conducted among 727 Detroit families. The survey was revealed that children exposed to tobacco smoke have respiratory diseases twice as frequently as do children in non-smoking families. A similar study conducted in Denver came to the same conclusion — that smoking is not only injurious to the smoker, but to other members of the family as well.
