Holiday Fashions

most women's wardrobes. Fur hats, always a favorite in the winter, see no sign of decline, even as revival cloches, helmets, veiled fedoras and derbies appear for a bite of their popularity. Crocheted wool berets and caps, with matching scarves, eye for a spot with coats.

Whether the fashions are new arrivals, survivals or revivals they'll make holidays dressing and giving a festive grand bazaa.

Distaff DEEDS
By Jan Christensen

By JANICE R. CHRISTENSEN One Johnston County homemaker, enrolled in the Expanded Nutrition Education program, wanted a garden so badly she asked her husband and son to plow an area near their house.

The husband, an elderly man, hunted and picked up enough soda bottles to make the down payment on a small garden tractor. The son used the new tractor to plow the area and to keep grass and weeds out of the garden, reports Mgt. Dorothy Johnson, home economics agent.

OPEN HOUSE

One of the pleasant things about having a new house is sharing it with friends and neighbors.

So the James Earl Redmond family, Greenville, is planning an "Open House" in their new three bedroom dwelling.

The house, built by Extension Plan 95, has one bedroom large enough to accommodate four daughters and a smaller one for their two sons.

The half bath off the master bedroom and a utility area directly off the kitchen-family room are two other features the Redmonds especially like.

Mrs. Redmond looks at open house as a chance "to show others that a house can have a coordinated look throughout, if good planning is followed."

The Redmonds and other families have discovered that extension agricultural and home economics agents are trained in housing and have a stock of free house plans for low to medium-cost houses.

USE ALL RESOURCES

Using skills she learned in a drapery construction workshop, Mrs. Joan Davis, the Eskridge Grove Community, Cleveland County, is saving about 50 per cent on the cost of new draperies.

Mrs. Davis believes sewing is a wise investment of her vacation time. The money she saved by buying fabrics at the mill outlet and the money she saved by making her own draperies helps to make up for wages lost.

"We try to use all our resources, including time and know how, to get the things we want," Mrs. Davis told Thelma E. MeVea, home economics extension agent.
