

THE TAR HEEL SPOTLIGHT

The "Rasp," the "Hayseeder," and the "Blasting Powder," may not be household words today, but they were among the many early newspapers that served North Carolina.

These and many other papers-most admittedly with more commonplace names-are preserved on microfilm at the State Archives in Raleigh and are available for use by any citizen.

The project to preserve all the early newspapers of the state was begun in 1959, and today virtually all of those published prior to 1901 (of which copies could be found) have been copied.

The "North Carolina Gazette" published at New Bern is the oldest paper in the collection with one copy dating back to November 15, 1751. Others dated prior to 1800 were published at Edenton, Fayetteville, Hillsborough, Salisbury, and Wilmington.

The number of papers that have existed in North Carolina almost defies believability. Charlotte and Greensboro, for instance, have both had about thirty each; Wilmington has had more than forty; and Salisbury has had more than fifty. Our capital city of Raleigh has had almost 150 separate newspaper enterprises. Needless to say, many of the papers that proliferated during the 1800s were very short-lived.

Over one thousand separate newspaper titles have been photographed in this effort to preserve an important source of information about our state's history, and all are available on microfilm for public use. Copies can be viewed at several major libraries around the state in addition to the State Archives in Raleigh. A 105-page book entitled "North Carolina Newspapers on Microfilm" lists all the papers, and it is available in practically any North Carolina library.

CORN IN STORAGE

On April 1, there were 3.3 billion bushels of corn in storage here in the United States. This is far in excess of any foreseeable needs, even if this year's crop is short, observe extension crop specialists, North Carolina State University.

STORAGE AREA

Sandwich spread cans with plastic lids make good sewing basket arrangers. Buttons, drapery hooks, snaps, pins and needles can be easily sorted and recognized through the transparent tops.

Clothes Styles Often Influence Home Styles

RALEIGH — Home decorating styles often follow the same lines as clothing styles.

We've gone from the crisp, tailored look to a softer, more relaxed look in our wearing apparel. And the same is true in housing apparel, says Mrs. Edith McClamery, extension house furnishings specialist, North Carolina State University.

We've gone from the crisp, hard finished surfaces in furnishings to a softer, more comfortable way.

Colors are not as sharp. They're softer, more muted, easier to live with. Fabrics are no longer crisp and crackly; they're soft and drape easily. Some are quilted, giving a rounder, cozier feel to fabric furnishings.

Carpeting, too, has a softer look. The shags that have been so popular for a number of years are now leaning toward a long-clip plush effect. This gives a softer feel underfoot, too.

Furniture seems more inviting. Its gentle curves and softer coverings seem to encourage more relaxed evenings with a good book or in friendly conversation.

To top it all off, today's home furnishings are more carefree. Many soft fabrics have a durable press finish which means no ironing. And fibers, though they look luxuriant, are tough and resistant to spotting and soil.

We are reading more and more about organic gardening and the superiority of foods produced by this method of plant nutrition.

What is organic gardening? Simply stated, it is the production of food crops by the use of organic materials, such as animal manures, compost and plant residues, as contrasted with the use of commercial fertilizers.

Plants need a balanced ration just as animals. We usually think of a balanced fertilizer as containing nitrogen (N), phosphorus (P), and potassium (K) along with minor trace elements, iron, magnesium, sulphur and others. It is possible to get this balance in an organic source with any degree of accuracy; so why take chances.

Animal manures vary widely in nutritive value, depending on the kind and how the animals were fed. Sheep and poultry manures contain more nitrogen than horse and cattle manures, but all of them are deficient in phosphorus and potash when we consider the total nutritive requirements of our plants for maximum growth and production.

It is true that any organic material added to the soil will improve the physical structure and water holding capacity. However, unless you supplement the organics with commercial fertilizer, you cannot expect maximum plant performance.

Another point: Any organic material added to the soil must be broken down by soil microorganisms before it can be absorbed by the roots. In other words, within the plant all the elements have the same effect regardless of whether they were added to the soil as organics or as commercial fertilizers.

There are many soil types in North Carolina from coarse sands to heavy clays. Many of them will develop deficiencies of some

Employment Survey Set

Information on employment and unemployment will be collected in this area by the bureau of the Census, U. S. Department of Commerce, during the week of July 17-21, Joseph R. Norwood, Director of the Bureau's Data Collection Center in Charlotte, announced today.

The sample of households in this area taking part in the survey are among 54,000 across the Nation scientifically selected to represent a cross section of all households.

The survey is taken monthly by the Bureau for the U. S. Department of Labor. Statistics on conditions in the labor force are prime indicators of economic conditions of the country.

For example, the May survey showed that there were 4.3 million unemployed, or 5.9 percent of the labor force. After seasonal adjustment, this was the same level as in April and March. Employment, however, increased slightly over the previous month, a continuation of a year-long upward trend. Since May 1971, the number of jobholders rose by 2.3 million, totaling $1.4 million in May of this year.

All information about individuals and families provided the Bureau is held confidential by law and can be published only as statistical totals.

Interviewers who will visit households in this area include: Mrs. Ethel S. Rockett 908 South Street Gastonia, N. C. 28052 Mrs. Jacqueline H. Goforth 1301 Montrose Drive Shelby, N. C. 28150
