Garden Time

The 16 years I have been writing this column, I do not remember that I have ever attempted to discuss the field in which I have spent a lifetime—HORTICULTURE. There are so many mistaken notions about the industry, I thought some facts and figures might better help you understand it.

What is HORTICULTURE? Horticulture is a science, an art, an avocation and a multi-billion dollar industry. The annual income from the production, processing and utilization of horticultural crops is between 10 and 12 billion dollars. It is the fastest growing industry in the field of agriculture.

Horticulture is a science because all the tools of modern scientific procedures are utilized when investigating the basic complexes of plant responses; and working out solutions of problems facing the industry.

The Art of Horticulture is apparent to everyone who appreciates the finer things of life. Well landscaped homes, parks, shopping centers, highways, apartment complexes and industrial plants are all a part of the Art of Horticulture. Perhaps the purest art form in the field of horticulture is floral designing.

Horticulture is big business and affects our daily and vegetable, in either fresh or processed form, constitute approximately 40 percent of our daily diet.

There are more people engaged in horticultural pursuits than in any other branch of agriculture. This brings into sharp focus the importance of agriculture in this field. It is estimated that people engaged in horticulture as an avocation, or hobby, spend approximately 4 billion dollars annually for goods and services—plants, seed, fertilizer, pesticides, sprayers, pruning tools, lawn mowers, etc.

It is of more than passing interest to note that North Carolina geographically, occupies a unique position in the states of the nation. The state extends from the sun of the Atlantic Ocean to the highest peak in eastern America. Since many plants have a limited range of adaptability, these climatic changes make possible a suitable environment, somewhere within the borders of the state, for the production of practically all of the plants to be found in the temperate Zone.

VA Questions And Answers

Q — I named my mother as beneficiary of my VA insurance while I was single. I have since married, but now plan a divorce. Can I change beneficiaries again?

A — Yes. VA regulations permit an insured to change beneficiaries as many times as desired.

Q — I was separated from active duty several years ago. When will my GI Bill entitlement expire?

A — Assuming you are otherwise eligible and were released from active duty after Jan. 31, 1955, you have eight years to use your GI Bill benefits or until May 31, 1974, whichever is later.

Q — Can the lender who gave me my GI home loan legally raise the interest rate on my balance?

A — No. VA regulations do not permit interest rates to be increased above the contract rate agreed upon when the loan was made to the veteran.
