DAR State Historian Was Hambright Guest Speaker

Mrs. William Davis, State historian of the North Carolina Daughters of the American Revolution Society, was guest speaker for the March meeting of Frederick Hambright Chapter of the DAR at the home of Mrs. W. L. McMackin.

Interesting facts concerning "Life On The Western North Carolina Frontier" were given. In her research, Mrs. Davis discovered that settlers of this area came from as far away as Pennsylvania and Maryland, as well as Virginia and Carolina. These early "comers" frequently frequently land by occupied by

"Squatter's Rights." The church was the center not only of the religious life of the community but the nucleus of the social, civic, educational and military activities as well.

The homes on this Western frontier were made up of logs, and, even those considered "fine," were about 20 by 24 feet with none of those things the present day considers "necessities."

Among the mountain ople, clothing was vastly different from the satin gowns worn in the large cities in the eastern part of the state. Since cotton was not grown generally until 1815, the settlers depended clothing material. Sanitation was practically unheard of: washing clothes three or four times a month, no refrigerator, no screens at open win-
