

KM Man Delivers His Own Son

veterinarian's son, and his Lamaze training, prepared him. "I didn't even know what gender the baby was until Linda or Lee Ann said it was a boy," he said. "I was concerned with the baby's health. We didn't have any kind of a suction, so I took the mucus out of his mouth with my finger."

"I wasn't nervous," Terry said. "I was anxious for the baby and wanted to make sure he was breathing."

"It was more of a conversing act when we felt the baby," Sandy said. "We wanted confirmation from ourselves and Linda. Afterward, we felt we were lucky that nothing went wrong."

The Stefanicks said they were grateful for the quick response of the Sheriff's Department and Rescue Squad. "Even though the baby was already born when they arrived, they were there at just the right time had anything gone wrong," Terry said.

The couple said they decided to go ahead and deliver the baby in the Sanders driveway, because they felt like they could not make it to the hospital.

"Had we gone on," Terry said, "we would have had to stopped on the side of the road anyway. If I had it to do over, I wouldn't have gone to the car. We could have stayed in the house and had warm water and towels."

"Our main reason for going next-door was so we'd have someone to watch Trevor," Sandy said.

The Stefanicks said many babies could be born safely at home through Lamaze training. "But," Terry said, "I certainly wouldn't do this intentionally."

After only a few short hours in isolation at the hospital, Cristan Lee was in the room with his mother, and everything was perfect.

"The doctors said we did real good," Sandy said. "There was nothing negative said about it. They said we did a good job under the circumstances."

"Everybody said we had a lot of guts," Terry added. "I don't think it was that. It was just the circumstances."

"I don't guess it will be necessary for us to run a birth announcement in the paper now, will it," Sandy asked.

But, just for the record, Cristan Lee is the grandson of Dr. John E. and Doris Stefanick of Sharon, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. Rex Lee Brockway of Kalamazoo, Mich., and the great-grandson of John A. Stefanick and Harry Conant of Sharon, Pa.; Leona V. Brockway of Kalamazoo, Mich., and Mr. and Mrs. Keith Sanvidge of Oshkosh, Wisc.

MARTHA WRIGHT

Wright Completes Her Term

Mrs. Martha H. Wright of Grover recently completed her year as President of the North Carolina School Food Service Association.

"The best word to describe this year would be 'busy,'" Mrs. Wright said. As president of the organization, her responsibilities included developing programs and leadership seminars in the areas of food preparation, sanitation and safety, among others. She was also involved in working with school boards and administrators through NCSFSA's affiliate organizations. Mrs. Wright recently returned from the North Carolina School Food Service Association's annual meeting, held May 27-29 at the Inn on the Plaza in Asheville. The theme of this year's meeting was "Images '82", which was described by Mrs. Wright as "a concept toward looking at the image of child nutrition as a challenge of the work ahead."

As part of the Association's efforts to provide suggestions that will help food service, the Youth Advisory Council has been formed. The Council consists of students across the state who help Association officials select foods that are appealing to students as well as being nutritious. Mrs. Wright said that while good nutrition is the Association's main priority, they still want to make the foods attractive.

One problem Mrs. Wright has encountered during her term as president has been funding from Congress, an area she has been actively involved in. Development of the outlined programs depends on funds from Congress, and on convincing Congress that the monies are being well-managed.

Mrs. Wright thanked the Board of Education for supporting her during her term as president, and said the experience she gained would be helpful to her in her work with Kings Mountain District Schools.

Mrs. Wright, a native of Grover, graduated from Kings Mountain Senior High School in 1966 and East Carolina University in 1970. She has done graduate work in Business Management and Foods and Nutrition, and has served on the summer teaching staff at UNC-G in Food Service Training. She served as a classroom teacher in Wayne County for two years and came to Kings Mountain in August, 1972. She is married to Charlie Wright and they have two sons, Chuck, a first grader at Grover School, and Jason, 4.

She will be succeeded in her position as president by Jane Bass, Director of Child Nutrition Programs for the Rocky Mount City Schools.
