A memorable milestone in the evolution of the motorcycle is a revolutionary liquid-cooled 90-degree, four cylinder V45 engine. This engine has become one of the smoothest, quietest, lightest and narrowest ever designed.

The engine's 90° configuration results in a perfect primary balance. The compact size of the V-four layout reduces overall size and weight, thus enhancing handling. This engine powers the 1983 Honda V45 Sabre and Magna motorcycles.
