The city claimed it was not aware of the regulations and the Atlanta office has instructed the Greensboro office to determine whether any further action is required by the city for property already acquired. The Greensboro office has also been instructed to determine through routine monitoring visits that the city is furnishing property owners the required information and documenting its files.

Finding eight - The report claims the city did not follow HUD requirements in the administration of Rehabilitation Loan programs. The weakness, it says, is related to the failure to prepare work write-ups and cost estimates, execute contracts, limit loans to the CDBG target areas, limit general property improvements, and provide controls over contract progress and payments to the contractors.

The city claims it is taking steps to correct the situation and the Greensboro office has been instructed to conduct a site review of the program.

Finding nine - The report claims that in administering labor standard requirements the city needed to improve its procedures relating to contracts, pre-construction conferences, contractors' payrolls, site visits and employe interviews.

The city claims a lack of staff restricted the movement of its coordinator in making an adequate number of inspections and interviews. Corrective actions are being taken.

Finding 10 - The report claims the city does not have a formal system for monitoring program activities and evaluating their effectiveness and has not been submitting an annual report which includes information on the progress and effectiveness of program activities.

The city claims it has not established any formal system for monitoring because it was not aware that a formal system was required, but will begin a monitoring and evaluation system for its various activities conducted under the CDBG program.
