FEDERAL LIBRARIAN
The Government maintains several types of library facilities requiring the services of professional librarians. Among them are: (1) Specialized libraries servicing specialists, technicians and other agency personnel; (2) hospital libraries similar to public libraries, servicing military personnel and their dependents; and (3) hospital libraries especially adapted to the needs of patients. In general the work involves selecting, cataloging and classifying publications, and rendering reference, bibliographic and other library services. Qualifications Required: For most entrance positions, a full 4-year course in an accredited college or university, including or supplemented by 16 semester hours in library sciences will

My voice shall Thou hear in the morning, O Lord; in the morning I will direct my prayer unto Thee. — (Psalm 5:3.)
Each morning that God grants us is a new opportunity, a new beginning and a new life, if we choose to make it so. It should begin with prayer, thanking Him, seeking His presence, His love. His will—and then we will enter into the new day strong, confident and blessed.

qualify. Courses in biological, physical, or social sciences may be helpful for positions in specialized libraries. Applicants must pass a written test. Career Opportunities: Practically all Federal agencies have libraries and employ librarians (a total of nearly 4,000 in the Government service as a whole). There is a continuing need for a number of college graduates as replacements each year. Opportunities for advancement to the middle grades are fairly good. Library work provides pleasant associations with other people and opportunity for movement to different parts of the United States or abroad.
