rounded out her second year in the home. Tall, suare and bespeckled "Dr. Five," popular disc jockey of Durham's WSRC is one of the top label spinners in the country. The "Doc" is credited with having discovered. financed and encouraged a number of present-day performers to the heights of their fabulous careers. At present he is promoting his newest find, Don "Pretty Boy" COVAY, who is a Sue recording artist and a top-notch entertainer.

Dapper JIMMY BYRD, who is also "Dr. Jive", and his attractive wife Thelma, were Saturday night guests at the swanky Press Club where his protege. Don Conway, brought the house down with a dazzling executive acrobatic routine that stemmed from a hot tune he sang with the gusto of a Broadway favorite doing a first nighter on the "Great Whiteway"

JOE INGRAM of Kinston "thawt" twice before he gave a passing penhandler his last two bucks, who claims he hadn't been able to get to his home in Charleston, S. C., for the past twenty years. Joe felt 'cofly" sorry for the fellow: but exclaimed, "he had been unable to get from Raleigh to Kinston in five years, so he needed the two bucks on his ticket that would cost nearly $4.00. Then Joe "poorlightly" asked the stranger for the extra two bucks he needed.

The first great basketball combination to play for North Carolina College in Durham were forwards Charles Cogdale and O'Neal Vanstory, both of Rocky Mount. It was back in the late twenties that Dr. C. G. "Cad" O'Kelly, right arm to Dr. James E. Shepard, and the greatest athletic recruiter of his day, brought the Cogdale-Vanstory combination to the attention of the college world. Through the efforts of Dr. O'Kelly the institution had been a baseball powerhouse with an O'Kelly star filling most positions

Ted Stroud and Emmet Caidwell, Chapel Hill; William Nutall, Stoval; "Big Red" Cooke, High Point; "Cheese" Vincent, Wison Mills, Macon Harris, Hamlet: "Catch" Love, the late "Lish" Thompson of Goldsboro and others. Lath Alston was a home boy: but he was an Officely influence. So was Carolina Times publisher. Louis Austin whom the professor brought in from Enfield. The school was "so-so" in (ootball; but in basketball it was nothing

Cogdale and Vanstery were stars on Rocky Mount's old Lincoln Heights High School team and were turning fans away from the Warehouse where the team played . . Dr. O'Kelly on a visit spotted the two sensations and sold them the idea of the advantages of a college education. They matriculated at the Furham school and so baskethall team in college circles ignored their being there.

That was the beginning of noticeable basketball at the Durham institution. O'Neal Vanstory died in Baltimore a month ago and was buried in the "Monumental City". Cogdale is employed by a Rocky Mount undertaking firm. Pitiful about some Negro colleges. The good boys who spread their names when the "poor" institutions were "scuf fling for survival are forgotten when the pay checks glitter with security month after month. Very few present staff employees at State ever heard of Vanstory, even in death, but the basketball carry-over that he left behind him has never left the campus.

James Johnson, twice All-State quarterback for Chapel Hill's Mnooln High School Tigers, will spring train with the Tennessee State
