DEAR SALLY

BY SALLY SHAW

DEAR SALLY: For several months I have been going out with a very fine woman of 35. She has never been married, but I would like very much to change that. The only trouble is that I can never seem to get her alone long enough to discuss this. She has a 12-year-old niece who spends every week-end with her and, no matter where we go, the niece goes with us—and since I'm a salesman out of town all during the week, the only time I can see this woman is during the week-ends.

She says the girl has been spending the week-ends with her ever since she was a baby, and she couldn't bear to disappoint the child now by asking her to stay home at any time. I like the little girl and I dislike appearing jealous of her, but you think this wonderful woman and I should have at least a little time alone together? As things are now, I'm stymied.

DEAR WARREN: Methinks this woman is keeping you stymied "with malice aforethought." If she were in the least interested in matrimonial discussions, believe me, you wouldn't have to be knocking yourself out figuring how to get her alone! My advice to you, if you're really bent on marriage, is to look elsewhere.

DEAR SALLY: I'm a high school girl of 17 with a real serious problem. I've been going steady with a boy of 18 in our school, but realize now that I don't love him one little bit, and I want to break up with him. The trouble is that he's a very nice guy and I'm just too softhearted to hurt him. I know that he's crazy about me and if I told him that everything is over between us, he'd have practically a nervous breakdown. I've talked this over with the girls in my sorority and not one of these 20 girls can come up with a really good solution to my problem. Can you help me? JAN.

DEAR JAN: It beats me how a girl who claims to be "too softhearted" to hurt a fellow can broadcast her intentions of unloading him to 20 other girls. If you really want to break up, tell him. He's positive he'll survive.

DEAR SALLY: Our son is engaged to marry a girl who lives at our local YWCA. Her home is in a distant city and she does not have many friends in this town. I know that, according to the rules of good taste, it is not proper for relatives to give showers—but I would like very much to do something of this nature for her. Do you have any suggestions? MRS. R.F.G.

DEAR MRS. R.F.G.: How about a tea or bridge party, or some such informal get-together, for the purpose of introducing your son's fiancée to his friends and relatives?

DEAR SALLY: Some little time ago, my husband (age 43) told me there was a woman in his office who had been turning on the charm for him. This bit of news was proved later when she began phoning him here at home. I could hear only his side of these conversations and he was very politely firm with lots of negative answers. Now last night he brought home a note she had written to him at the office and handed it to me with the comment, "Isn't this the nuts?" That note was one of the gushiest pieces of mick-mash I've ever read. What shall I do? Do you think there's anything going on that I'm too dumb to see? WORRIED WIFE.

DEAR WORRIED WIFE: And I fail to see why in the world you should be "worried." It's clear that there's nothing going on—otherwise, you would not have been finding out about it from your hubby. Why don't you and he be an answer together right on her letter, signing it together, and all you really have to say is what he's already blurted out—"NUTS."

TO SWEET THIRTEEN: It's according to one of nature's little laws that boys of your age are not so mature as you girls. But they'll catch up in a couple or three years, and I strongly advise that you bide your time—because certainly you are not mature enough to be going with much older boys. At 13, you would be having more important things than boys to occupy your mind, time and energy.

SEE — You are positively the worst dancer I ever saw.

HE — Well, it's something to know that I excel in that respect at least.

'Momentous Decade' Being Closed Out At Fla. School

TALLAHASSEE — Florida A&M University closes out "a momentous decade," the nineteen fifties, when the year 1959 fades out and the nearly 4,000 students and faculty members look forward to the sixties.

Speaking before the FAMU family during the annual Christmas Convocation, Dr. George W. Gore, Jr. told the faculty and students that "We are witnessing the close of a momentous decade, the nineteen fifties. A resume of the highlights of the past ten years indicates that many earthshaking events have transpired.

"In addition to projections into outer space, many events taken place in the world, in the of tremendous importance have United States, in the South, and in Florida. In truth, we have witnessed a bloodless revolution.

"Here at home, Tallahassee has literally doubled itself in size; so has FAMU. Since 1950, we have erected on the campus 23 buildings valued at over 10 million dollars. From the enrollment of approximately 1600 students in 1950, we have expanded to over 2800 in 1959-60.

Whereas the total budget in 1949-50 was $1,600,000, in 1959-60 the budget is $3,400,000. Whereas the total number of employees in 1959-

MRA Says 1960 Year Of Choice For Americans

There are two ideologies bidding for the world today. One is Moral Re-Armament, which believes that God's Mind should control the world through human nature that has been changed; the other is Communism, which believes that man's mind should control the world through human nature that has been exploited.

God's ideology will win. William Penn put the issue clearly — "Men must choose to be governed by God or they condemn themselves to be ruled by tyrants."

Time is running out. No man or nation can escape the choice—Moral Re-Armament or Communism. Khrushchev offers the false alternative of co-existence or war, disarmament or nuclear annihilation.

MRA's task is to make the whole world conscious of the true choice. MRA offers America and the whole world a superior ideology that will cure the causes of both Communism and war, and create the incorruptible men and women that will make democracy the most effective idea in the world.

This ideology works and will win. The evidence during the last months alone is conclusive. Archbishop Makarios, the new President of Cyprus says, "I have followed closely the work of Moral Re-Armament and particularly appreciate its contribution to the solution of the Cyprus problem."

Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of Germany writing to Frank Buchman recently said, "You know what great significance I attach to the ideological fight which MRA is waging in the whole world. Unless this work is carried forward peace cannot be maintained."

Prime Minister Kishi of Japan says, "The leaders of the free world must pay serious attention to the work of MRA throughout the world struggle for the future of mankind."

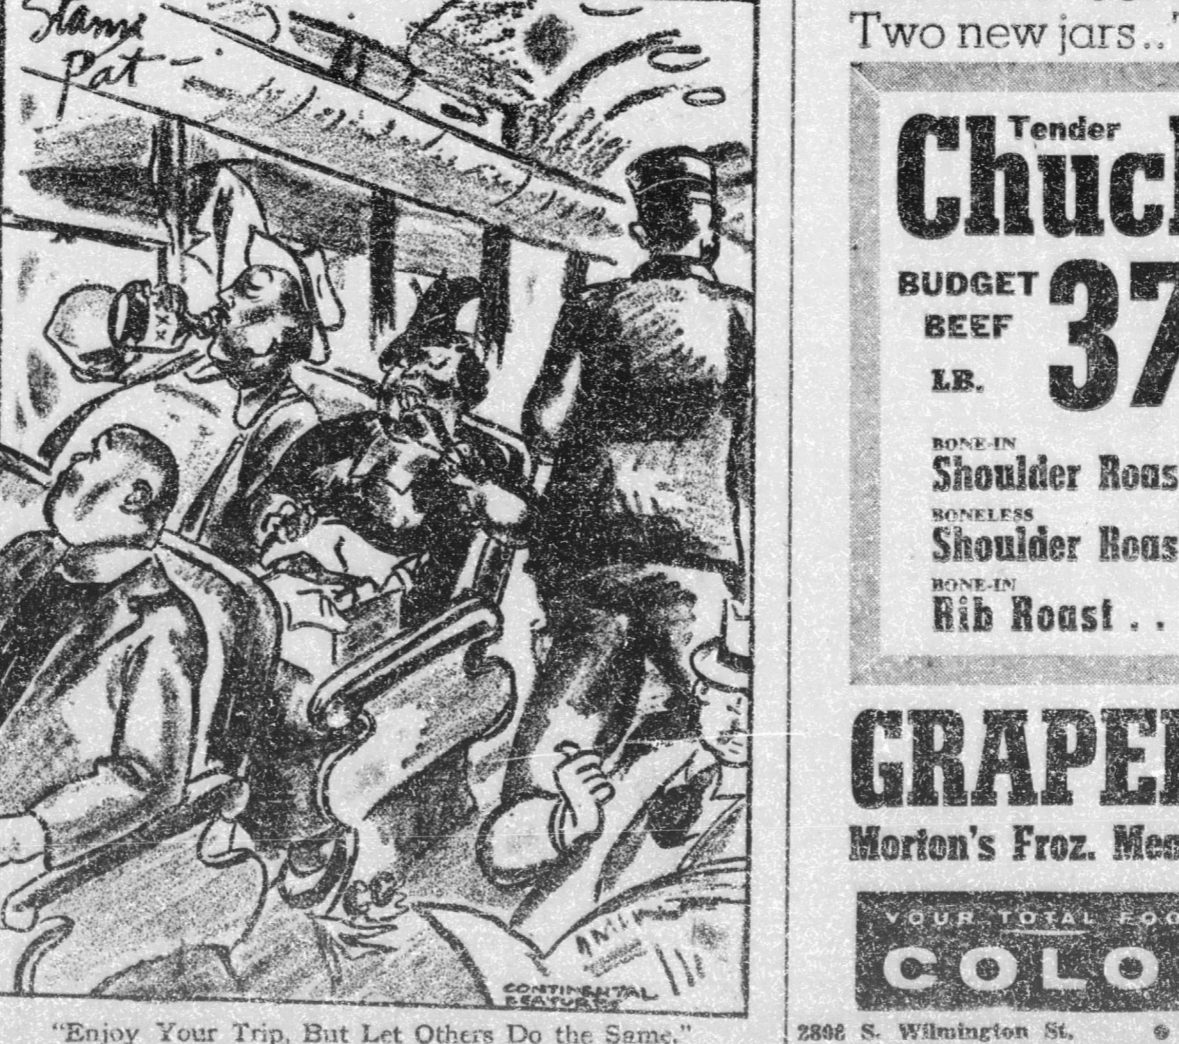

Moscow's stepped-up attacks against MRA in the last few weeks reveal their concern. These attacks have come from Tass, Moscow's official news agency, Pravda, Radio Moscow and in a three-column front-page editorial in Humanite, the organ of the French Communist Party.

Moral Re-Armament is curing the causes of division, economic injustice, fear and hatred on which Communism feeds.

It is rapidly multiplying the secret of God-centered unity without which civilization will destroy itself.

In the words of Gabriel Marcel, the great Catholic philosopher, "It is a hope—perhaps THE hope."

State's Farmer Are Urged To Breed Cows Before Jan. 15

FARMERS URGED TO BREED GREENSBORO — To get increased production, at less cost, dairy farmers are being urged to breed cows prior to January 15.

This advice was issued recently by R. L. Wynn, dairy specialist with the A&T College Extension Service.

He states that it is much more profitable for cows to freshen in the fall than in spring and winter. Records reveal that returns on feed costs are much higher than those which have freshened in the spring and early summer.

He states further that such a breeding schedule works perfectly with the labor supply in the normal small farm operation. More time can be devoted to herd management during the winter months.

once the cash crops have been harvested.

Cows bred prior to mid-January will come fresh in time to allow the dairyman opportunity to realize much more in profit at the end of the lactation period.

Get more pigs in a commercial swine operation by following a systematic cross-breeding program.

Save more pigs in a commercial swine operation by getting rid of sows after their third litter.

Grow more pigs by feeding extra plus a good supplement (free choice, either on rotated pasture or on concrete feeding floors).

A goal to shoot for in a commercial swine operation is eight or more pigs at 150 to 180 days weighing 200 pounds or more.
