

'Black Monday' Is Called Success In Vance County

N. C. SCHOOL CONFRONTATION SCENE - Henderson, N. C.: Rev. Leon White (R-suit) and Ben Chavis (L-of White) are met at the city limits of Henderson as they arrive with about 400 blacks on a march from Kittrell. Talking to White is Highway Patrol Capt. Don Jenkins, Henderson Police Chief William Crocker (center) and Sheriff L. B. Falkner (L). White, who said he is Director of the N. C. - Va. Committee for Racial Justice, complained that the county has sought to preserve school segregation. The marchers were permitted to march to a Baptist Church for a rally. (UPI).

'Black Monday' Said 'Profile In Courage'

After successfully completing a march from the Kittrell College to the Shiloh Baptist Church, Henderson, the Rev. Leon White, Executive Director of the N. C. - Va. Committee for Racial Justice described the historical event which took place on "Black Monday" as a "profile of courage" for the Black people of Vance County.

"Black Monday," Nov. 2, had been proclaimed by Black leaders in Vance County after the Vance County Board of Education refused to close the segregated Nutbush School in spite of a long protest of Blackparents.

When negotiations broke down between Black community leaders and the School Board, Rev. Leon White along with Mr. Ben Chavis issued an ultimatum to the Board of Education by a telegram which read as follows: "Time has run out. Segregated Nutbush School is still open. Our student demands have not been met; therefore, we proclaim Monday, November 2, as "Black Monday," the day Black people will stand together in Vance County."

With strong support from students and teachers at Kittrell College, Black protesters began to move slowly toward Henderson to the Shiloh Baptist Church knowing that Henderson Police Chief W. F. Crocker had vowed to stop them at the city limits.

When the march started, Henderson became an armed camp. School and downtown businesses were closed. All available outside police force in the area was summoned. Riot equipment could be seen everywhere. Word came over the radio that protesters would be stopped at the city limits, but the protesters continued to march to Shiloh.

Black community leaders fearing violence from the police met the marchers about four miles from their destination and requested Chavis and White (See VANCE COUNTY, P. 2)

Galifianakis Tops Hawke In Big Race

BY ALEXANDER BARNES
A look at the results of Tuesday's election in predominantly black precincts in Raleigh, 25, 26, 34, 35 and 20, along with 10, 11, 12, 13 and 24 in Durham, it is very obvious that the black vote saved Nick Galifianakis for the sixth straight time in his bid to keep a job in Washington.

A look at the activities at the above named polls revealed that potential voters were handed a slip of paper, on which was the names of the persons for whom they were to vote. It was also obvious that many of the voters would ask "where is the paper." Political leaders in both Raleigh and Durham have used this process to deliver the black vote to the candidates of their choice. In most instances their choices have been Democrats.

In the congressional race, Galifianakis was accused by Hawke of being a big spender and receiving money from special interests. The 4th District congressman was also alleged to have campaigned on the fact that he was not against busing, but would fight to the last ditch to see that it was not used to correct the racial imbalance in the schools of North Carolina.

Hawke, the Republican contender, handled the busing matter in a more dignified way, by saying that he was a Republican and would therefore back the Republican policy on the situation. Hawke was accused of being inexperienced and also had to run with Vice-president Agnew's disfavor with Negroes. The matter of black candidates on both party tickets was the main topic around the voting places in Raleigh and Durham. In Raleigh many observers wondered why there were no blacks on either party's slate. It was pointed out that the format of Wake County politics is made up to the extent that no blacks ever are offered beyond the city level. (See DEMOCRATS, P. 2)

Blacks In Nash Get $40,000

BY J. B. HARRIS
ROCKY MOUNT-The all-Negro Nash County community of Drakes, (originally named Berry Hunter's Cross Roads after the pioneer Negro whose family founded the first store there some half-century ago; and his nephew, Richard Cooper, Jr., now operates the store), has just received an FHA loan of $20,000 and a $19,000 grant to form the Drake Water Association Inc., on N. C. highway 48 north of this city and five miles west of Battleboro.

Otto Moore is president of the Drake Water Assn., Inc. The forty-five family members who will be served have been working on the project for several months and have contributed of their time and finance to initiate the plan. Other officers include: Richard Cooper, Jr., vice president; Mrs. Lillie R. Garrett, secretary. (See $40,000, P. 2)

NEW CONGRESSMAN AND WIFE-Oakland, Calif.: Democrat Ron Dellums and his wife Roscoe exude happiness during press conference after his victory over Republican John Healy for Congress in California's 7th District November 4. Dellums thanked Vice President Spiro Agnew for the "national publicity" he gave his campaign. Agnew had recently asserted that Dellums was an apologist for the Black Panthers. (UPI).

Mother Of Columnist Given Rites In City

Mrs. Ella Locklear Morgan, 114 N. State Street, mother of CAROLINIAN columnist and beloved music teacher, Mrs. Emily May Morgan Kelly, died Thursday, Oct. 29, at the Knollwood Manor and Rest Home, following a lengthy illness. Mrs. Morgan is also survived by three sons. Funeral services were conducted at the First Baptist Church, corner of Wilmington and Morgan Streets here, Sunday, Nov. 1, at 1 p.m., with the Rev. Dr. Charles W. Ward, Sr., pastor, delivering the eulogy. Interment followed in Mount Hope Cemetery, Eastern Star Rites were conducted.

A native of Wake County, Mrs. Morgan was the widow of the late Henry Morgan. At an early age, she accepted Christ and lived an ardent Christian life serving faithfully in the Martin Street and First Baptist Churches. In these Churches, she held such positions as Sunday School teacher, president of the Woman's Auxiliary, President of City Missionary Union, vice president of the General Group and co-chairman of the Evangelistic Committee of the First Baptist Church. She was a loyal (See MRS. MORGAN, P. 2)

Congressman Heard In Greensboro

GREENSBORO-A&T State University recently unveiled a $730,000 computer system, giving the university the third largest computer capacity in the state. Speaking at the dedication of A&T's Computer Science Center, N. C. Congressman Richardson Preyer said "the goal of offering a bachelor's degree in computer science at A&T is a wonderful thing, because it carries out a sound national policy." Preyer said the project was an excellent case of the federal and state governments and private enterprise supporting higher education. In initiating its program, A&T received $175,000 from the National Science Foundation, $90,000 from Control Date Corporation, $140,000 from the A&T University foundation, and other funds from the state for maintenance and personnel. The principle equipment in (See GREENSBORO, P. 2)

E. N. Morial Becomes Judge In Louisiana

NEW ORLEANS - Ernest N. Morial, only Negro in the Louisiana legislature, resigned this week to accept an appointment as judge of the juvenile court in New Orleans. This brings to two the number of black judges in Louisiana. The other, Judge Israel M. Augustine, Jr., was appointed and then elected months later to a seat on the criminal judge bench. Morial, 39-year-old attorney, has had a brilliant career for his 33 years of life. He was graduated from Xavier University with an A. B. degree and was the first black to (See NEW JUDGE, P. 2)

Stabbed In Back And Cut

A Raleigh woman told Police Officers J. W. Tew and J. A. Privette a harrowing story of how she narrowly missed being stabbed to death at 10:08 p.m. last Thursday.

MISS IDA MAE STRICKLAND

Miss Ida Mae Strickland, 33, 111 N. Carver Street (Lincoln Park), stated that Eugene "Bro." Price, 31, whom she said lives at the corner of Sewell Ave. and E. Lane Street, in an apartment, assaulted her with the knife, including stabbing and cutting her at the residence of York Morehead, 910 1/2 Oakwood Ave. The woman received several cuts about the face, back and buttocks and two stab wounds in the back. According to the cops' report, "All of the parties were drinking when an argument developed between Price and Miss Strickland." According to her, after Price assaulted her, she fled the scene and flagged down an unknown white male motorist, driving a white buick, who transported her to Wake Memorial Hospital, where emergency treatment was given. USES CHAIR LEG
Mrs. Betty Irene Kearney, 43, 1521 1/2 Battery Drive, told Officer J. L. Arrington at 7:46 p.m. Friday, that her husband struck her on the head with a chair leg. She said they were arguing about their children at the time of the incident. "Both parties had been drinking," Arrington's report stated. The husband, Graham Harris, was charged with public intoxication, after being found in the 1500 block of Battery Drive. The woman was taken to Wake Memorial Hospital and treated for a one-inch laceration on the head, then released. Mrs. Harris said she would sign an assault with a deadly weapon warrant against her mate, who told the cop that his wife "came after me with a knife." (See CRIME BEAT, P. 3)
