'To Stay In Raleigh,' Indians Say

Asking for a place to camp out in tents until Friday, when a rally will be staged in Raleigh, leaders of the Robeson County Indian Movement unveiling plans Tuesday morning to carry on their campaign here for recognition of the Tuscarora tribe through this week. However, the Raleigh City Council will have to give approval before the takeover of Moore Square (across from the Old City Market). Site of the rally will be Capitol Square.

According to Golden Frinks, state field secretary for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said the rally might draw as many as 15,000 persons to Raleigh. During a Tuesday morning press conference, Tuscarora Chief Howard Brooks, stated that the Indians would not send representatives to confer with Republican Governor James Eubanks Holshouser, but did meet with Lieutenant Governor Jim Hunt.

Angry at the cancellation of the 4 p.m. meeting planned Tuesday with the Governor, a spokesman for the Governor's office stated that Dr. Larnie Horton, black minority affairs specialist for Holshouser, told the Indians that the Governor had made his 4 p.m. meeting date "in good faith."

The reasons that the Indians came to Raleigh, according to Chief Brooks, is because "the Governor has not dealt with the problems of Robeson in Robeson County."

The State Commission on Indian Affairs has sent a representative to the Tuscarora Indians and offered to allow them to sit in on a "pow wow" or field meeting, called to discuss problems of the Haliwa Indians of Halifax County, who also are unrecognized.

The Indians will continue to press for a formal meeting with the entire commission. Brooks and Frinks said a representative from Holshouser's office was told after the press conference that the Indians would meet with the Governor only as a group and (See INDIANS TO, P. 2)

EDITOR'S NOTE: This column or feature is produced in the public interest with an aim towards eliminating its contents. Numerous individuals have requested that they be given the consideration of overlooking their listing on the police blotter. This we would like to do. However, it is not our position to be judge or jury. We merely publish the facts as we find them reported by the arresting officers. To keep out of the Crime Beat columns, merely means not being registered by a police officer in reporting his findings while on duty. So simply keep off the "blotter" and you won't be in The Crime Beat.
