J. Battle, Alexander Barnes, Charles A. McLean, Mrs. B. Glenn and Mrs. A. M. Bynum, was named to work out the mechanics and report to the board as soon as possible. The lobbyist will maintain an office in Raleigh throughout the entire session of the 1974 General Assembly. He will keep close contact with the lawmakers and carry on a close liaison between them and the state office, along with that of the governor, attorney-general and other state agencies.

He will also keep close contact with the Washington Bureau, in the hope that solons from North Carolina may have documentary information as it relates to national laws proposed in congress.

APPRECIATION

The incident took place at Gray's house. At that time, Gray was arrested on an assault with a deadly weapon rap.

Officer Tew's statement continued, "After completing the investigation of this incident, it was determined that the act of sodomy or crime against nature had been performed on the complainant by Mr. Gray, who was arrested and charged with crime against nature and placed him under a $200 bond and placed him in Wake County Jail."

Young Upchurch, who suffered a sore rectum, was not otherwise injured.

Gray was listed as owning a 1964 Chevrolet.

It was not listed on the offense report as to how Upchurch was transported from Walnut Terrace to Gray's house across town in the Idewild section of the city.

from one white man to his brother. We need to create institutions that will put these resources to work for us."

Nationally recognized banker Dempsey J. Travis, president of the predominantly black United Mortgage Bankers of America, to the surprise of some, echoed Baraka's comments in a paper presented before a conference symposium on housing.

Travis called for the "breaking down of large cities into autonomous bodies politic" in order to give blacks an opportunity to "control their own destiny."

On the issue of improving inner-city housing, Travis asserted, "Unless the black community can deal with and control tax assessment, zoning and code enforcement, we can forget about redevelopment of any sort and even forget about retention of what we've got."

The Rev. Douglass Moore, head of Washington, D.C.'s Black United Front, disrupted the conference symposium on housing and transportation to announce his opposition to "many of the subway systems being built in major metropolitan areas around the country."

He charged that these systems are not designed to benefit inner-city residents, but to transport "whites from their well-paying jobs in the cities to their expensive homes in the suburbs."

Rev. Moore, too, said the only solution to the problem was for blacks to gain political and as much economic control as possible in the cities where they are becoming the majority.

Another Washington resident, Marion Barry, who heads the city's school board, said that he had stopped coming to such conferences because "they never accomplish anything."

Perhaps summarizing the positions of those calling for more inner-city power, black nationalist Baraka asserted, "The main default of the cities is that the people who live in these cities do not have any power. The cities are run by people who live outside the city in the suburbs."

off to Canada. They testified against him and Chavis at the trial.

Chavis was freed at that trial, but was later given 34 years at a trial in Burgaw, on a charge of burning a grocery during the protest in Wilmington. Two different young men testified against him and other members of the Wilmington 10.

The witnesses used against Grant and Chavis at Raleigh testified against Grant and two others who were convicted at a trial in Charlotte.

SCEF Plans Expansion In Carolina

EPES, Ala. - The Southern Conference Educational Fund (SCEF) plans to expand its campaign to free political prisoners in North Carolina. It also plans to build a network to support organizing efforts of black and white workers across the South.

These actions were voted by the SCEF directors at their semi-annual meeting here. They decided to put two new organizers into the field in Eastern North Carolina, one black and one white.

Repression of the black liberation movement is heaviest in that area, both through court action and physical attacks on black people. A special effort will be made to involve white people in protest against it.

This would also counter actions by members of the Rights of White People (RWP), who acted as vigilantes during a protest by black people in Wilmington two years ago. The Rev. Ben Chavis, a member of the SCEF board; Ms. Mollie Hicks, and her daughter Leatrice, face trial June 18 on charges growing out of that protest, but no members of RWP have been arrested for their activities in Wilmington.

The Wilmington 10, including Chavis, have been given a total of 242 years in prison as a result of protests against racial discrimination two years ago. Eleven teenage boys were sentenced to a total of 133 years in Ayden.

Jim Grant, a reporter for SCEF's newspaper, The Southern Patriot and an organizer for SCEF, is serving 35 years in prison as a result of his activities in the state are also being jailed for rebelling against their situation, and some white people have been sentenced for organizing against war and racism.

SCEF plans delegations to the governor: wider circulation of petitions for freedom for all political prisoners, rallies in various cities and close cooperation with labor, peace, civil-rights, and civil liberties organizations.

The State employment services placed more than 263,000 Vietnam-era veterans in permanent civilian jobs during the first eight months of fiscal year 1973.

Ronnie Dyson Owes Success To Mother And Comforting Surroundings Of Home

At home with rock, pop, gospel and soul music, Ronnie Dyson with his current Columbia single, "I Just Don't Want to Be Lonely," is a seasoned vet at 22. The angelic choir boy of a singer who first made it big with his part in the Broadway production of "Hair," owes his success to his mother. A dedicated fan of her son's singing, Mrs. Dyson was working as an operator at a telephone answering service.

One of the companies clients placed a call for talent for an upcoming show. Mrs. Dyson made the call herself right from the answering service office, acquiring an appointment for Ronnie's audition. Not only did he make it into the show "Hair," which was being moved from Greenwich Village's Cheetah Club to Forty-fifth Street, he inspired the writing of the seventies liberation theme "Aquarius" enjoying a 19 month run with the show.

Since "Hair," the young Dyson whose show deliverance is a cross between the good things found in a night club performer and the power of a soul singer, has made his clear tenor noticeable from the Catskills to the Copacabana, the Merv Griffin, Tonight, Mike Douglas talk shows to "Putney Swope" and Pepsi commercials. With Dyson, the original tune serves as "the merest frame work on which Veterans in school are reminded that in order to receive their checks for allowances under the GI Bill, they must make certain that the certificate of attendance is forwarded to the Veterans Administration.

A Vietnam Era veteran from Lowell, Mass., has become the holder of the 8 millionth GI home loan processed by VA since the beginning of the agency's loan guaranty program in 1944.

His vocal career began with gospel church singing at age three. To date it is still in gospel that he revels. During later success and career preparation, Ronnie remained in the choir of his church and traveled with them around the country. "I'm a church going boy," he explained gladly, "and I always have been and always will be."

At five, Ronnie entered a local talent show at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. Singing "Why Do Fools Fall in Love," a favorite tune of his. It was a brand new experience for him to be in front of a live audience. An experience he didn't want to forget.

In school, his goal was medicine hoping to someday become a doctor (a thought he hasn't entirely put out of his mind). With Ronnie's "big break" in "Hair" at 17, he was unexpectedly a "star." Unfortunately for his solo plans, the play itself drew the bigger limelight.

Ronnie Dyson now has a stimulus in producer-writer Thom Bell, arranger for the O'Jays and producer of groups like the Spinners and the Stylistics, which will bring him the fame and notoriety he is due. Regarding his current Columbia album, "One Man Band," which includes the single of the same name, Ronnie beamed, "I feel very good about the new product I recorded with Thom Bell. He's probably the hottest producer in the world today. His writing partner, Linda Creed also helped a great deal with the album. Not only did she co-write four of the tunes, she re-mixed six songs recorded on other sessions. They're both dynamic people."

"It feels great to have a record climbing the charts," Ronnie added. "But, I knew it was going to happen because of Thom and Linda. They made me feel really comfortable and the songs were right. I just felt it had to happen."

From "When You Get Right Down To It," the earliest hit of Ronnie's on the album, to his latest work with Bell, "One Man Band" is a fine showpiece for one of the most distinctive, versatile voices in music today.

ACCEPTS SECOND MILE AWARD - Marilyn Lewis accepts the prestigious President's Second Mile Award from Morgan State College president, Dr. King V. Cheek, Jr. at the college's 106th annual Commencement exercises. The prize goes annually to that member of the graduating class who has made the most outstanding contribution to the campus community during his or her undergraduate days - "going the second mile." Miss Lewis, a graduating senior from Baltimore, Md., was editor of the Morgan Spokesman, the college's weekly newspaper, during the past school year.

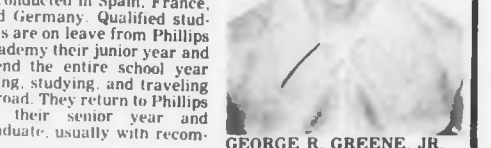

George Royster Greene, Jr., son of Atty and Mrs. George R. Greene, 2101 Lyndhurst Dr., has been accepted for admission to Phillips Academy, Andover, Massachusetts for the 1973-74 school year.

Greene Accepted At Phillips Academy

Opened during the Revolution, the school was incorporated in 1780 with the title Phillips Academy. John Adams became the headmaster in 1810 and Phillips Academy made great strides under his leadership.

The school was established to lay the foundation of instructing youth, not only in English, Latin, grammar, writing, arithmetic and those sciences wherein they are commonly taught, but more especially to teach them the great end and real business of living.

Class size is limited by the interest and ability of the students. The average class size is nine pupils with no class larger than fifteen pupils. "School Boys Abroad" is a program operated jointly with Phillips Exeter Academy and is conducted in Spain, France, and Germany. Qualified students are on leave from Phillips Academy their junior year and spend the entire school year living, studying, and traveling abroad. They return to Phillips for their senior year and graduate, usually with recom-

Vice Chancellor Of NCCU, Jones, Resigns

DURHAM - William Jones, vice chancellor for financial affairs at North Carolina Central University, Tuesday announced his plans to resign after 25 years of service as the institution's chief business officer.

The resignation, said Chancellor Albert N. Whiting, "marks the end of an era." When Mr. Jones came to the university, then North Carolina College at Durham, the campus included four dormitories and five academic buildings. As the university's chief business officer, he oversaw the construction of two high-rise dormitories, Baynes and Eagleson Halls, the New Residence Hall on Lawson Street, and Chidley Hall, now the campus's men's dormitory.

Other buildings constructed during his tenure at N.C. Central included the campus's biology building, chemistry building, classroom building, commerce building, education building, home economics building, health education building, men's gymnasium, cafeteria, student union, and the James E. Shepard Memorial Library.

Currently, construction is underway on an addition to the home economics building, a new communications building, and a new football stadium. By the effective date of Jones's resignation, August 1, bids should have also been let on the construction of an addition to the library.

Mr. Jones will not leave the university's service entirely. He is taking advantage of the state's early retirement plan, but will assume a part-time role as Assistant to the Chancellor - Director of Affirmative Action and Planning.
