Percy Daniels has "strong racial overtones," according to Rev. Leon White, director of the United Church of Christ North Carolina-Virginia Commission for Racial Justice. Rev. White is an observer in the trial and is at the present time making plans to mobilize a statewide effort against the death penalty.

The entire jury contained only one Black woman who was a cousin to the defendant. The State excused her without cause. Dare County, a resort county on the outer banks of North Carolina, has a Black population of less than 10 percent of the total population.

A brief demonstration was staged by the Black youth in Manteo, N. C. as the trial got underway. The Chief of Police declared a state of emergency and as quick as the picket signs appeared they vanished. Rallies on behalf of William Percy Daniels have been staged nightly at the Free Grace Disciple Church. Rev. Leon White is the chief organizer of the rallies and demonstrations on behalf of Williams Daniels.

Black citizens charge that the indictment of rape and kidnap against Daniels is an attempt on the part of the white leaders in Manteo, N. C. to discourage mixed dating. Interracial dating is a growing concern of many white people in this small resort town of Manteo. Seven jurors were excused for cause by presiding Judge Perry Martin of North Hampton County, because the jurors stated that they could not vote for the death penalty under any circumstances.

Daniels is being defended by John Wilkerson, a prominent white attorney from Washington, N. C. Wilkerson seconded the nomination of Sen. Barry Goldwater for presidency in 1964 in the National Republican Convention.

"There are five men on death row at Central Prison in Raleigh, all are Black," said White. The Commission for Racial Justice plans to call a statewide conference against the death penalty during the month of October. "The death penalty law in North Carolina is more stringent," White went on to say, "since the U. S. Supreme Court declared the N. C. Capital Punishment Law unconstitutional." Later the State Supreme Court validated the law by nullifying a section which gave the jury the option to recommend mercy which automatically resulted in life imprisonment.

First degree murder, first degree burglary, rape, and arson now all carry the death penalty upon conviction. White claims that the law gives the State solicitor too much power over a defendant. A defendant commonly facing the possibility of a death penalty commonly enters into plea bargaining, that is pleading guilty to a charge which he did not commit in order to avoid the possibility of facing death.

"That unjust practice must be stopped," White declared. A white jury of nine men and three women were impaneled at 12:45 by the court.

AID, has made a total commitment of $41.8 million to the six affected countries, mainly in food for Peace sorghum, supplied by the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture. Under the World Food Program, the United States has committed $3.8 million for grain and $1.8 million for transportation. Under a grain stabilization program, AID is providing $3.6 million for grain and $4.3 million for transportation, and under bilateral emergency programs, AID has committed $12 million for grain and $11.6 million for transportation. A total of $4.7 million has been allocated for AID's Contingency Fund to help meet needs other than food, including transportation.

Bond describes the constituents of the "new politics" as urban militants, campus rebels, small farmers who refuse to pay rents, welfare people, housewives who are tired of rising prices and "high school students, who want to wear their hair more than one inch long."

Bond's appearance is one of the lycium features of Saint Augustine's College. The public is invited without charge.

women. "We must assert rights and assume responsibilities in a spirit of independence linked with brotherhood and sisterhood," she said.

Ms. Maymi further emphasized that minority women have been a valuable resource to the Women's Bureau in identifying special problems and in working toward solutions.

She stressed the need to involve other resources which can contribute toward elevating the economic and legal status of all women.

the same right," he asks. Francis has warm praise for Brother Joseph Davis, executive director of the National Office of Black Catholics, which has its headquarters in Washington, D. C. and Bishop Joseph Howze, Auxiliary Bishop of Natchez-Jackson, Miss., new president of the NOBC.

He describes Brother Davis as one "who has demonstrated again and again his commitment to the whole Church while carrying out efforts that will strengthen the black community within the Church." All who know Bishop Howze, he adds, know "that his commitment is to the whole Church."

Francis also emphasizes that "when the black Catholic community is strengthened the whole Church is strengthened," and commends the National Office of Black Catholics as "a valid means for strengthening that community within the unity of the whole Church."

The meeting was held in secret partly because several important black leaders were not invited. Two non-elected black leaders, Vernon E. Jordan, National Urban League director, and Jesse Jackson, head of People United to Save Humanity, were invited but did not attend.

need, for industries who come into Soul City will need trained personnel and will be interested in a good system of public education. And our citizens will need education to have equal access to satisfying jobs and a good life.

Mrs. Clayton noted that she is leaving the Health Manpower Development Program at a point where its stability and future progress are more assured. Under her direction, the program has developed from limited activities with uncertain funding to a statewide program with affiliated activities on five university campuses, receiving permanent state funds as well as federal contracts and foundation grants. "I am very pleased with the development of the Health Manpower Development Program," said Mrs. Clayton, "and I will continue to be interested in and to work for its progress. But I feel that I can now turn to other needs. I am delighted to accept the challenge of a position with the Soul City Foundation, for this will allow me to be deeply involved in the life of my own community — Warren County, and to develop social programs in an area of great need." Mrs. Clayton, an alumnus of Johnson C. Smith University, North Carolina Central University, is a native of Augusta, Ga., and now lives in Warren County. Before going to the Health Manpower Development Program, she served as Executive Director of the Eastern North Carolina based Economic Development Corporation. She now serves on the Board of Directors of the same corporation, The N. C. Federation of Child Development, The N. C. Voter Education Project, and The Southern Regional Council.

then continued nonstop to California. It returned on Saturday night of this week.

The National Baptist Convention, U.S.A., Inc., is the largest religious body of black people in the world. It contains a membership of approximately 6 million people. Dr. Joseph H. Jackson of Chicago is president. Others from North Carolina will be attending the convention by commercial airlines, train, and automobiles. The shorter flight, arranged by Baptist Headquarters in Raleigh, was filled to capacity and some people remained on a waiting list until the plane left.

The California convention is one of three nationwide baptist meetings being held this week. Annual sessions are being held elsewhere by the National Baptist Convention of America in Chicago, Illinois; and the Progressive National Baptist Convention in Jackson, Mississippi. A number of North Carolinians will also attend the other two conventions.

MASONIC

The rains came just before the planned time to assemble and the parade was cancelled. However, the Elks, both groups were decked out and displayed their splendid regalia. The Odd Fellows and the Household of Ruth displayed their finery. There was also representation from other groups.

The three Masonic Lodges, Doric 28, Dorcas 460 and A. S. Hunter 825, accompanied by their Eastern Star sisters, led the way. Zafa Shrine Temple and the Daughters of Isis were resplendent with their sparkling fezzes and bedecked jewels.

Dr. A. D. Moseley, in the main address, chided the different orders about their regalia, but also admonished them that Prince Hall was imbued with a burning desire that those who came after him, no matter with what they were identified with, would remember that the mind was the measure of the man and that he should always use it to make brotherhood a reality not in words and signs, but in deeds.

Alexander Barnes, president, Durham Branch, NAACP, with the purpose of the meet in mind — to aid the NAACP, thanked the audience for this fine demonstration in helping to fight the cause of freedom.

U. S. A., Inc., the largest black organization in the country, has re-elected its president and appropriated $50,000 for food and clothing to aid drought-stricken West Africa.

The organization, which has a listed membership of 6.5 million — equivalent to about 28 per cent of the black population — returned Dr. Joseph H. Jackson of Chicago to office as president for the 21st time.

In what delegates said was the group's largest attendance ever, the 20,000 delegates to the convention also returned the other major officers to office and later earmarked the money to help the six million Africans suffering in the West African area.

The National Baptist Convention, USA is separate and distinct from the National Baptist Convention of America, which is often referred to as the "unincorporated" body.

The Baptist Convention, USA is the parent convention of Negro Baptists.

In his acceptance speech, Dr. Jackson told the delegates: "The depletion of our natural resources and the tragic Watergate struggle are God's way of telling us to put moral content into our lives."

"God wills to save us, but if he can't save us with plenty, he will visit us with famines, floods and other privations that will bring us to our knees."

"It may be He will check the flow of gas, reduce the abundance of fuel and freeze our autos in the streets, ground our planes and push us back to the horse and buggy days."

Controls Possible For Ants in Wrong Places

That tireless little worker -- and frequent pest -- the ant has been busy since spring began and by now may have become a nuisance. If he has, there's something you can do about it.

Recommended treatments of infested areas can remove ant problems in or around the home, according to North Carolina State University extension entomologists. Most kinds of ants are easily controlled.

You may find a nest of them in the lawn or garden, under the front steps or walkway. In foundation walls or in any number of places. While the ants generally aren't harmful, they can be hard to live with -- particularly if they get into the kitchen and try to share your food.

Control should start with good sanitation, suggests Dr. H. E. Scott, NCSU extension entomologist. Keeping food spillage cleaned up and containers tightly closed will help prevent worker ants from being attracted into the home in search
