

Wounded Students Receive Grants

Forty-eight Israeli university students seriously wounded in the fighting in Lebanon will receive special grants from the Memorial Foundation for Jewish Culture.

At the Foundation's annual meeting, which took place in Paris during the Lebanon conflict, the Board of Trustees voted to allocate $50,000 for "special grants for students in Israeli universities and yeshivot hesder who were wounded in the Lebanon campaign".

The 48 students are studying at the following universities and yeshivot hesder in Israel: Bar-Ilan University, Ben-Gurion University, Hebrew University, Technion - Israel Institute of Technology, Tel-Aviv University, University of Haifa, Yeshivat Kerem B'Yavneh, Yeshivat Kiryat Arba, Yeshivat Maaleh Adumim, Yeshivat Moreshet Yaakov and Yeshivat Sha'alvim.

"The Memorial Foundation," Dr. Jerry Hochbaum, Foundation executive director, said, "makes grants to institutions for research, publication and education, and for documentation and commemoration of the Holocaust. It awards grants to individuals for their training for careers in community service, Jewish scholarship and research, for advanced training for top Jewish leadership posts, and for independent scholarly, literary or art projects. The grants to the Israeli university and yeshivot hesder students wounded in the Lebanon fighting are a special allocation to demonstrate our support for Israel and Jewish scholarship."

Established in 1964, the Memorial Foundation helps assure a creative Jewish future by fostering the preservation and transmission of Jewish culture throughout the world. It is a living memorial to the six million Jews who died in the Holocaust.

More than 80 students attended the Fall Semester of the Institute. The Spring selection of classes reflects many of their suggestions. Classes are repeated both hours to allow more people to take advantage of popular choices. New courses are introduced in Philosophy and Literature. Two courses are being repeated (one of them is offered each hour) in order to enable those who missed them in the Fall to have their benefit.
