The Angel

Address by Prime Minister Menachem Begin, at the Knesset, on the 70th Birthday of Raoul Wallenberg and the 30th Anniversary of the Yad Vashem Law, 9 May 1983.

During the Holocaust of the Jewish people in Nazi Europe — the Holocaust which can never be forgotten — the Jews stood alone and isolated. They were locked in ghettos, starved and abused. They were killed, and no one came to their assistance.

After the death of the six million, the term "Bermuda Conference" has become synonymous with the conscious abandonment of millions who were condemned to a variety of terrible deaths. Many of them could have been rescued; but rescue was not forthcoming.

Even before the onset of World War II, before millions of people were wiped out during nearly six years of torture, when fiendish technologies were employed to murder men, women and children, there was the Evian Conference. That conference, too, will go down in history as a masterpiece of deception, when representatives of states rose in turn and said: We have no room for Jews. This was especially tragic when said in reference to the National Home, the homeland of the Jewish people, the Land of Israel: There was no room for Jews.

In Yad Vashem, the institute that was founded to commemorate both the Holocaust and the heroism of its victims, are recorded the names of 3,500 righteous members of other nations who did their best to help Jews escape the murderous enemy. This may seem a large number; but it is very small in proportion to the tens of millions of people throughout Europe who could have proffered aid and did not do so.

These Righteous Gentiles who helped our condemned brothers, are relatively few; but they will be remembered for generations to come. The Jewish people may forget the actions of its enemies. It will never forget the deeds of its friends — and I would say, first and foremost among them — was a noble young man who volunteered to go to Hungary for a single purpose: to help Jews escape those who planned to an-
