

New Staff Position Created

Susan Ett, the present JCC Adult Activities Director, recently announced her resignation which became effective June 1. Susan held this position since June of 1984 and has decided to pursue other career and educational opportunities in the Charlotte area.

This development has stimulated discussion by the JCC Personnel Committee concerning our future staff needs. The committee has decided to upgrade the position, creating a new program coordinator job at the JCC. In addition to maintaining some of the same job responsibilities, such as directing the adult and senior adult programs at the Center, this new position will be expanded to include coordinating all JCC activities and publicity. The great increase in programming anticipated in the new Center has created the need for this type of position.

The Center is seeking applicants from the local Charlotte Jewish community for this upgraded position. Applicants should have experience working with adults and senior adults either in a community center or in a related setting. A Master's degree is preferable, but not absolutely necessary depending on experience. Strong public relations skills and an ability to manage and follow-through on various projects at the same time is a must. This is a challenging and exciting position as we approach the opening of the new Center. All interested persons should contact Marty Schneer at the JCC (366-0357).

Phase-In Process Bears Fruit

The JCC Phase-In process, begun last September with the appointment of 22 different committees to review and recommend a variety of policies, programs and procedures for the new Center, has reached its final stages. A majority of the committees have submitted their reports to a steering committee of Center and community leaders chaired by JCC vice president Mike Scharf. This steering committee has started to review reports, making specific recommendations to be presented to the full JCC board.

Marty Schneer, Executive Director of the Center, echoed the sentiments of the steering committee when he remarked that "the committees have done an outstanding job developing a full range of recommendations that will greatly assist the staff in developing programs and procedures for the new facilities." The JCC board hopes to discuss, evaluate and approve all phase-in reports by early fall. The many dedicated volunteers, who took part in the process and made this large undertaking such a success, will be informed as to any changes or additions in their reports as they are reviewed. The JCC will also highlight many of its recommendations and new policies in future issues of The Charlotte Jewish News.

Classes For Teens and Adults

Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitation and First Aid classes are being offered by the American National Red Cross, Carolinas Chapter for the JCC's Camp Maccabee staff. The classes still have openings, so if you've never taken C.P.R. and First Aid, or just need a refresher course, now's the time! Join Camp Maccabee's staff Wednesday, June 12 for C.P.R. and Thursday, June 13 for First Aid, at the Red Cross (2425 Park Road in Charlotte) from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Costs are $10 for C.P.R. and $15 for First Aid.

To register, call the JCC, 366-0357 or the Red Cross, 376-1661.

Special Events Planned

Israeli Scouts Fr

This summer the JCC is planning several special family events.

The first is a performance by the Israeli Scouts Friendship Caravan, Thursday evening, June 20, 7:30 p.m. at the Idlewild-Olympic Clubhouse.

The Friendship Caravan is a group of ten English-speaking Israeli boy and girl scouts, ages 16-17, one adult Israeli Scout and one American Leader. They travel in a minibus to visit Jewish summer camps, scout camps and community centers throughout the United States.

Membership Appr

The JCC will be sponsoring several events for members and their families beginning on June 22. An adult pool party is planned on that date at the Idlewild Olympic Club (details forthcoming). The main impetus behind the events, according to JCC Director Marty Schneer, is to thank members for being a part of the JCC and to also provide an opportunity for members to share their ideas

Summ

As part of its "for members only" series, the JCC will be hosting an evening with the Charlotte Summer Pops Orchestra. This is the third year for this much requested evening of delightful family music. As always, the evening will be topped off with the ever popular make-your-own ice cream sundaes.
