Schorr Spoke to a "Full House"

By Laura Knight

Daniel Schorr, National Public Radio news analyst and veteran broadcaster, analyzed the Reagan presidency and commented on future ramifications during his recent weekend visit to Charlotte as the I.D. Blumenthal Scholar-in-Residence.

On Saturday evening an audience of about 325 people heard Schorr speak on "America in the Post-Reagan World." Schorr outlined three consequences of the Reagan administration, re-

Temple BEVS News

On Sunday evening, April 2, the Nursery Committee presented its third topic in its Jewish Parenting Series: "But Where Is My Grandma?", teaching and talking to your children about death. The evening's discussion group was led by Rabbi Seigel. For more information on the Parenting Series, contact Nina Haas, 365-1029.

On Friday, April 7, a special Shabbat service in honor of the Social Action Committee, will be held.

The Congregational Passover Seder will be on April 19. This Seder is always a wonderful evening for our Temple family. Please make your reservations early at the Temple office, 366-1948.

The Sisterhood, as always, prepared a lovely dinner for Purim, with over 100 people in attendance. The Youth groups of the Temple participated by serving the dinner and preparing the Oneg.

Congratulations to Honey Kridel on her nomination to the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods, District #8 Board. Installation will be in Bethesda, MD on April 30 at the Biennial NFTS Convention.

The Temple's High Holiday Choir has begun weekly rehearsals for a musical Shabbat service, written by Martin Kalmanoff, to be performed during Shabbat services Friday, June 16. This choir presentation, directed by Steven Haas, is open to all members of the community who would like to participate in this exciting project. Please contact Steven Haas at the Temple office, 366-1948 for more information.

position to his role as peacemaker. Bush's challenge will be to expand this process to include the recognition that we no longer live in a bipolar world and most problems today are being shared by the U.S. and Russia.

Schorr stated that Reagan had an outstanding ability to articulate a vision that others could share. However, this ability combined with his frequent mistakes in stating factual matters created an attitude of disregard for facts and has made it difficult for the public to accept bad news. Bush does not have the same inspirational ability and may find it tough to govern following "Morning in America."

Schorr made a second presentation on "America, Israel, and the Mideast in the Post-Reagan World" at Shalom Park on Sunday morning.

garding domestic programs, foreign policy, and what Schorr called our national psyche. The massive budget deficit increases have virtually stopped any new programs that might creatively address continuing problems. Reagan's initial foreign policy centered on U.S. opposition to Russia as an "evil empire." Reagan gradually advanced from that

New Lectureships Announced

We've often heard that "success breeds success." The success of the annual I.D. Blumenthal Memorial Scholars-in-Residence Weekend has inspired three new annual lecture programs, all sponsored by local founders or foundations.

The Luski family is sponsoring a lectureship in Jewish Arts and Folk Culture, the Blumenthal Foundation will be the patron for a lectureship in Current Jewish Issues, and the Lerner family will sponsor a lectureship in the Jewish Community and its Future. All are to be annual events, and together with the I.D. Blumenthal Memorial Scholar-in-Residence Weekend, will comprise a series of four events throughout the year. Sponsorship will continue for a minimum of four years.

Rabbi Marc Wilson, who has enthusiastically supported the Scholar-in-Residence program and encouraged expansion of the concept to address more specific issues throughout the year, said, "We are very fortunate to have in Charlotte, families and institutions willing to sponsor these events. It is my hope that the lectureship will expand our horizons while helping to unite our community."

Dates and program information will be announced as they become available.
