Mint Museum Hosts Series

The Mint Museum of Art on Randolph Road in Charlotte and the Manor Theater on Providence Road will be hosting a special film series from September 29 - October 30, 1997 called Conflict and Peace: Recent Israeli and Palestinian Film.

The films will be shown on Sunday, Monday or Thursday.

The first film in the series is a Palestinian film by Michel Khleifi called Tale of the Three Jewels. The story, filmed in Gaza, is a mixture of realism and allegory about a Palestinian boy's love for a young Gypsy girl. It will be shown at the Manor on Sunday, September 29 at 12 noon, with a $4 admission charge. That evening at the Mint Museum there will remarks by the filmmakers, with dessert and coffee to follow at 8:00 pm. The evening film showing will be On the Edge of Peace which was directed by Ilan Ziv. It was co-produced by Ilan Ziv, Israeli.; Amit Breuer, Israeli; and Daoud Kattab, Palestinian. Admission to the event is $10.

Jerusalem: Rhythms of a Distant City, to be shown on September 30, is an impressionistic portrait of the many aspects of the city. With no narration, this short film conveys the complexity and vitality of Jerusalem and will leave the viewer with a vivid visual memory. Following it will be You, Me, Jerusalem which was co-directed by an Israeli and a Palestinian. It focuses on the working relationship between an Arab doctor and a Jewish paramedic and their loyalties. It is a warm and humanistic film that knits together a web of optimism.

The film on October 3 is All Hell Broke Loose. Curfew will be shown October 6 at noon and Ever Shot Anyone? will be shown that evening at 8 pm with a panel discussion.

Look Out and Forbidden Marriages in the Holy Land are scheduled for October 7. Arena of Murder is planned for October 13. Wedding in Gallilee concludes the series on October 20. Contact the Mint for more information.
