Their target: our children

Leading Authority on Countering Hebrew-Christian Missionaries Coming to Charlotte March 13-15.

Temple Israel Men's Club is bringing one of the nation's leading authorities on countering Hebrew-Christianity, Rabbi Tovia Singer, to Charlotte March 13 -15.

The theme of the weekend "Their Target: Our Children," is an effort to alert parents of Jewish high school and college students to the threat posed by "Evangelical Christians dressed up in traditional Jewish clothing."

Events scheduled include a Friday evening dinner with Rabbi Singer, a presentation during Saturday morning services and a special workshop co-sponsored by the Consolidated High School for Grades 9-12 Sunday morning.

Rabbi Singer is Director of OUT-REACH JUDAISM, a full-time national organization dedicated to countering the efforts of Christian groups and cults that target Jews for conversion.

"Hebrew-Christians," also known as "messianic Jews," are the foot soldiers in a rapidly growing movement funded largely by evangelical Christians. These groups dress Christian worship in Jewish symbols and traditions in an effort to win new converts. Rabbi Singer authored a guidebook called "Countering Hebrew-Christianity," published by the Federation of Jewish Men's Clubs, an arm of the Conservative Movement. The curriculum outlined in the book represents the first organized response to messianic Judaism.

Jews must be able to recognize their tactics and have enough knowledge to counter their assertions. To this end, Rabbi Singer has been working to equip high school and college students with information and an added appreciation of their Jewish heritage. ✪
