Officers Defeat Ft. Bragg, 38-36

Two foul shots by Lieut. Ed. Green with 20 seconds remaining gave the U. S. Navy Pre-Flight officers a 38-36 victory over Ft. Bragg in an overtime basketball game played there on Monday night. Last night the soldiers played the officers here in a return contest.

Tied 32-32 at the end of regular play, field goals by Ensign John Barr and Lt. (jg) Kenneth Hashagen, and Green's foul shots produced the winning margin. The officers led at halftime, 14-11.

Hashagen with 13 points and Barr with 10 sparked the winners to victory while Hampton led the losers with 13 points. It was the third win for the officers in four starts.

194 V-5'ers Arrive at Station For Eighth Indoctrination School

Arriving from all parts of the country, 194 new V-5 officers are undergoing indoctrination in the eighth V-5 course to be held here.

Commissioned in the naval aviation physical fitness program, the various coaches and athletes will go through academic, military and physical conditioning paces for thirty days—then become instructors helping to turn out future Navy flyers.

Ensigns Parker Hall, All-American at University of Mississippi and Cleveland Ram pro star; Bob Kellog, Tulane All-American; and Marvin Hutson, captain of Mississippi's Orange Bowl team, head the list of football playing names, while Lieut. Denny Myers, Boston College mentor and Lieut. Comdr. John Meagher, Auburn pigskin coach lead the luminaries from the bench bossing world.

Professional football adds to the ranks with Lieut. Dale Burnett, New York Giant star for many years, along with Ensign James McDonald, Detroit Lions footballer from 1938 to 1939.

Coaches galore are turning from sports strategy to military strategy, customs, traditions, and conditioning. From all parts of the country they've come.

Out of the west—Lt. (jg) Cletus Clinker, football coach at the University of South Dakota; Lt. (jg) DeWitt A. Portal, boxing mentor at San Jose State College and national boxing authority; Lt. (jg) George Stromgren, basketball mastermind of the California Aggies; Ensign Jack Baer, baseball boss at Oklahoma University, and Lieut. Arthur Bailey, baseball coach at State College in Washington.

Disproving that "ne'er shall the twain meet" there comes from the east Lieut. Albert Humphreys, head football coach at Bucknell College, and his pigskin assistant Lt. (jg) Sylvester J. Blum. In addition there's Ensign Andrew Palau, Fordham's backfield coach, and Lieut. Lyal Clark, Harvard's line mentor.

onds, gave a demonstration for the visitors. Lt. John Miller, former swimming coach at Princeton and Mercersburg Academy and now in charge of swimming here, directed an exhibition of Naval safety techniques.

"I've watched the way Germany and Italy train their Navy men," Lieut. Miller explained. "Their principal thought is in salvaging the plane or the ship. Our first thought is to teach our men to save themselves. We want them to come back regardless of what happens to their planes or ships."

Among State officials attending were Thad Eure, secretary of state; W. Kerr Scott, commissioner of agriculture; and William P. Hodges, insurance commissioner. Also on hand was Josephus Daniels of Raleigh, Secretary of the Navy during the last war. Mrs. Broughton accompanied the governor.

Lt. (jg) Kidd Brewer, public relations officer, had charge of the program, and Lt. Comdr. Harvey Harman, athletic director, arranged the sport events.

Just as soon as the legislators arrived in Chapel Hill they were divided into 10 platoons with officers of the school serving as leaders.
