Lieut. Raese Holds Varsity Basketball Practice For 37th

Varsity basketball practice got underway this week as around 20 men from the 37th Battalion reported to Lieut. Dyke Raese, USNR, head basketball coach.

"No cadets back of the 37th Battalion will be allowed to go out for varsity basketball," Lieut. Raese stated. He added that the first game would probably not be played until early December, and that all cadets except those in the 37th and later battalions would be graduated from here by then.

Last year's Cloudbuster quintet started out strong, but the loss of several key men near the middle of the season left the team with little in the way of basketball ability. The reason record was seven victories against a like number of defeats.

Cadets in the newly arrived 38th Battalion will be allowed to report for varsity practice next week. Workouts are being held on the Woollen gymnasium floor each afternoon during the Sports Program period.

Defeated teams last year included Duke's Blue Devils, Southern Conference Champions; LaSalle College; N. C. State twice; Wake Forest; Catawba; and the University of Virginia.

Losses came at the hands of Appalachian, Duke, Long Island, George Washington, Norfolk Air Station, Penn State, and Duquesne.

The most points made by a Cloudbuster in a single game were 31 against N. C. State in the contest played here. Captain of the Cloudbusters—Gus Broberg, former Dartmouth ace—did the scoring.

The schedule for this year has

Clemson, which bowed to the Deacons last Saturday, 41 to 12.

Leading the Wake Forest offensive power is Sophomore Tailback Nick Sacrinity. He ran a kickoff return 94 yards for a touchdown against V. M. I. two weeks ago, and last Saturday completed passes of 36 and 22 yards for two Wake Forest scores, and fought his way 15 yards with a lateral from Elmer Barbour to score a third.

As if that wasn't enough scoring power, the Deacons have two other backs who will cause the Cloudbusters trouble. Russ Perry and Grant are the names.

Perry scored two touchdowns against Clemson, and Grant, a substitute back who led the scoring in the Southern Conference for a spell, came through with one.

The Cloudbusters have been drilling for the Wake Forest game minus the services of seven men who saw considerable action in previous games. They are Cadets Raymond Norman, S. Budziaroski, J. T. Miller, V. L. Cleri, R. Annis, W. R. Long and W. C. Learned.

Norman and Budziaroski are wingbacks, Miller is a tailback, Cleri and Annis are fullbacks, and Long and Learned are guards.

It was Miller, if you recall, who tossed a touchdown pass to Norman for the only Cloudbuster score against the Georgia Pre-Flight.

Expected to furnish the Cloudbuster power this afternoon is Cadet Cecil Hare, while William Hannigan, up from Squadron Sports, might cause the Deacons trouble on end sweeps.

Hare, it might be well to mention, was a blocking back for the Washington Redskins last year, and did not even carry the ball. Coach Kimbrough has him running from the fullback position here.

Starting lineups:

WAKE FOREST	Pos.	PRE-FLIGHT
