Book Reviews . . .

HERE IS YOUR WAR by Ernie Pyle. Henry Holt and Company, New York, 1943. $3.00.

Little red-headed Ernie Pyle from the flat lands of Indiana, the Grantland Rice of the battlefields, probably tops all other columnists in sketching the common, intimate and personal side of troop life in the lines of combat. This book is a collection of items selected from his daily columns, and follows action of our army against Rommel's Afrika Korps from beach-head to enemy evacuation.

Ernie makes no strategic predictions. Rather he tells the story of the "Mikes," "Angelos," "Isadores," and "Helens," soldiers, nurses, entertainers, from the mountains of Colorado, the bayous of Louisiana, the farms of Iowa, and the avenues of Flatbush.

He traveled to Africa with the invasion forces, mixed with all units, shared their delight in the first mail received, learned a little Arabic, watched Carole Landis, Mitzi Mayfair and Kay Francis when they U. S. O'd in the desert.

ARRIVING WITH THE 45th Battalion on Feb. 10, Cadet John M. Lilley, of New York City, lost no time in breaking the Pre-Flight 50-meter free style swim record. Several other pool records are expected to be topped by the Yale alumnus before he completes Pre-Flight training.
