

"Lack of Experience" To Hurt Cloudbusters

Improvement Expected By Mid-Season

"Lack of college experience will make the Cloudbusters weak during the first half of the season," Lieut. Comdr. Glenn Killinger, head football mentor, predicted this week. "But," he was quick to add, "you can count on them to be plenty tough by mid-season."

Otto Graham, the six foot, 190-pound All-American football and basketball player from Northwestern, will be the big offensive threat, while Kermit Anderson, an end who was captain-elect at Colgate, and Kermit Atkinson, a guard who starred at Furman, are the line standouts.

Atkinson, who weighs but 185, has caused Lieut. Paul Bryant, line coach, to stop worrying about the right guard position. "He's light, but he's aggressive," Coach Bryant says of Atkinson, "and he's one of the hardest workers on the squad."

Frank Aschenbrenner, who is expected to start at left half, played varsity ball at Marquette University as a freshman, and he's considered a great prospect. So is Melbourne Sheehan, former freshman star at the University of Missouri, who will team with Anderson at end.

Austin Gandy, who weighs 180, stands 5 ft. 9 in., and hails from Soso, Mississippi, is slated for one of the tackle spots. He played previously at Jones County Junior College.

Cadets with no college experience, but slated for the first team, include William Clements, Los Angeles, Calif., who will be Atkinson's running mate at guard; Ben Lum, a Petersburg, Va. lad, who will start at tackle, and Charles

Military Field Mass Is Held

THE THIRD ANNUAL military pontifical field Mass was celebrated last Sunday morning in the Forest Theatre with His Excellency, the Most Reverend Eugene J. McGuinness, DD., Bishop of Raleigh, officiating. Pictured above is part of those in attendance, while in the insert is shown part of the service.

Coleman, of Concora, N. J., at center. Rounding out the backfield will be G. V. Fellabaum, El Paso, Texas, at fullback, and William Wilson, McKeesport, Pa., at right half.

Buy Bonds

Until You Drop Bombs—

SURVIVAL

(Continued from page one)

ground of officers now teaching some type of survival, to familiarize them with all phases, and to train additional officers to meet current and anticipated needs.

To accomplish this objective, nature was used as the principal textbook, with the men put on their own to practice various travel methods and techniques of living off the land.

To indicate just a few of the activities, the men learned how to prepare ingenious traps for snaring food on the hoof, to construct different types of shelter, to navigate by starlight, swim in rapids, rapel down cliffs, construct rafts, distinguish edible plants from poisonous ones, protect oneself against physical hazards such as extreme heat and cold, and against hazards from small forms of life such as malaria bearing mosquitoes, flukes, and fungus infections.

With emphasis on personal initiative, each of the men was sent on an individual forage trip last Tuesday with the responsibility of checking in with eight items at evening mealtime, including a 10-ft. bark fishing line, K-Ration key fish hook, one frog, fish, or snake, one fresh water mussel, one Indian turnip tuber, one arrowhead tuber, one Solomon's seal root, and one cupfull of silver berries.

With all the seriousness of the course, there was humor, too, such as when one member of the group hiked 14 miles to the Haw River Camp Site last Monday only to find on arrival that his unusually heavy rucksack had been generously weighted with rocks by his fellow travelers.

CUTLINES

(Continued from page three)

Lt. (jg) Leonard Blackburn, Chapel Hill, pausing for a drink that refreshes; and Lt. (jg) James Kessler, of Jacksonville, putting the finishing touches on a bark-made fishline.

Male Call

by Milton Caniff, creator of "Terry and the Pirates"

Mover-Slightly Beyond Prime

P 41