THE LONE INN.

A STORY OF MYSTERY.

BY FERGUS HUME

1 00 1 00 1 00 2 10 2 10

CHAPTER I. If there be aught in presentiments, I was well warned by that first glimpse of the inn. The monstrous bulk of gables, sloping roofs and lean chimneys have scared a bolder spirit than mine. All day I had walked under blue sky, between green hedgerows, with light heart and whistling lip. Confronted in the twilight by so sinister a scene, I felt qualmish. Ragged clouds dropped their fringes over sullen western red, around desolation, and I, with chilled blood, stared at the lonely mansion dominating the outlook. Here, thought I, an adver-2.55 ture awaits me. The hour, the house the scene, hint at romance, and that of the strangest.

So much were my spirits dashed by these ominous environments that it was ln my mind to walk the farther 10 "Bitterl miles and shelter for the night at Marshminster. Yet some fate compelled my unwilling feet toward that inhospitable door, and almost before I knew It opened while my hand was still raised 950 It opened while my hand was still raised for the final rap, and a handsome wom an presented herself to my astonished eyes. What beauty did among the tombs 4 30 I know not, yet there she smiled. 5 00 Though handsome, she was not a lady and lacked the undefinable stamp of birth. At the same time she was above servant, but something between the two. Her appearance confirmed the promise

"I have walked from Eastbury," said I, cap in hand, "and wish to put up 11.25 9.80 here for the night." "Marshminster is only 10 miles away," answered she, in nowise dis-300 posed to admit me. "And for that reason I want a bed here. Twenty and more miles walking under a hot sun has wearied me consid-

"The Fen inn, sir," she replied, still smiling, "and full of guests for the time stairs

"Full of guests in this locality! You must then entertain waterfowl, for I have seen no human being for the last "You don't know the name?" I rehave seen no human being for the last 1 90 12 miles," She made no direct answer, but shook by the mystery of this reception, I was about to insist upon admission when my attention was attracted to a face at the near window. I recognized it as that 7 50 her head and prepared to close the door. the near window. I recognized it as that of a college friend and waved my stick in greeting.

"Hello, Briarfield!" I shouted lust-

ily. "Come and help me to a night's lodgings." The girl was surprised by my remark, and, as I thought, changed color. She stepped aside to let Briarfield pass and exhibited further astonishent at the urbanity of our greeting.

"What wind blows you here, Den-525 ham?" asked Briarfield, shaking my 4 95 "I am on a walking tour," I an

"Surely Mr. Denham can have a bed?"
"I shall ask my father, sir!" When she disappeared, Briarfield 1770 turned to me with a smile and asked a strange question. 3 30 "Now, I'll be bound," said he, "that 1320 you don't know my first name!"

18 00 "No! You are wrong. I am not the rich Felix, but the poor Francis."

"You see the result of being one of 11 15 twins," said I impatiently. "If at college I could not distinguish between you, how can you expect me to do so now? I haven't seen either you or your look at you tonight I can "Impossible! She would detect the 5 00 brother 5 55 Felix? brother for at least two years. Where is "At Marshminster." "And what are you doing here?"

forthwith entered the house, followed by Francis Briarfield. The landlord, a lean, saturnine man above the common height, saluted me with a sour smile. In appearance and demeanor he was quite in keeping with that dreary inn. About him lurked a ries?" I asked abruptly. The herror of waten.

"It is now 8 o'cleck," he said, re-

"Besides which," I added, "our worthy landlord has doubtless neither trap nor horse."

By this time we had finished supper, and Rose came in to clear away. Thoughtfully filling my pipe, I watched ber closely. Undeniably she was a very

ica. Don't you call these mysteries? mysteries, replied Francis, coming to that there was a purpose connected with mysteries, replied Francis, coming to-ward the fire. "I know little about the inn, still less about the landlord and his daughter. As to myself, I am here by appointment to meet my brother Felix. ter of some relicf.
