It's Back To 'The Good Earth' For Retiree John C. McCraw

During the more than 30 years that John C. McCraw was a card tender, weaver and dyehand in textile mills of the South, he watched a lot of changes come to the industry.

When the retiree recently put in his last shift at the plant, his memory went back to the day he first began working—at the age of 19—in a cotton mill at Clifton, S. C. There the most laborious part of his job was the hand-stripping of the card. In the years that have passed since then, mechanical operations have put an end to time and labor-consuming operations. The present-day vacuum stripper on the card leaves the tender free to watch after the overall operation of the machine which forms an early link in the long process of cotton fiber refinement.

A NATIVE of Cleveland County, the retiree spent almost 15 years in the Carding Department here. After his first job at Clifton, he worked in mills at Cliffside and Mooresville, N. C., spending altogether around 16 years in mills before coming to Firestone. In the late 1930s he had a brief recess from textile work, when he operated a farm in Cleveland County. With the exception of a little while in the dyehouse and in the weave shop of a Mooresville plant, he has spent his factory years as a card tender.

McCraw has two sons and a daughter who are former employees of Firestone.

Mr. and Mrs. McCraw, who have been living at 1207 West Hooper street, Gastonia, have moved to their 16-acre farm in the Cherokee community near Gaffney, S. C. There the retiree plans to raise some pigs and to do some truck farming.

Long Distance From East To West

"From Manteo to Murphy" is a familiar expression which refers to the length of the Tar Heel State. It suggests this more-universally-known list of expressions making use of the word "from." When stripped of their disguise, they take their place among commonly-known figures in American speech. Can you convert them to their familiar form?

1. From the Pine Tree State to the Golden State.
2. From worn-out clothes to financial fortune.
3. From one extremity of the earth's axis to the other.
4. From a baby's bed to a cavity in the earth.
