

"Have you ever Noticed?"

Annie Sue Hoyle's superlative eyelashes?
Macie Rollins' perfect hair-dos?
Tom Forney's towering height?
Merryl Whisnant's gorgeous eyes?
Carrie Lee Weaver's sweet disposition?
Gerald Wallace's beautiful hair?
"Lib" Bridges' friendly smile?
John F. Carpenters' polite manner?
Dot (Brackett) Lees' cute figure?
"Til" (Miller) Bracketts' bright remarks?
Mrs. John Schencks' flair for wearing little hats?
Helen Walkers' quiet unassuming friendliness?
"Bardy" Hunts flashing smile?
Betty Lees' tinkling laughter?

* * * * *

Pfc. Durham Grigg stationed at Hendrix Field, Florida sent us a recent copy of "Yank", the Army weekly - We appreciated his thoughtfulness and enjoyed reading it very much. Below we print a letter copied from "Yank" - Thanks a lot, Durham.

Dear Santa:

Please send me the following: "One soft-spoken sergeant to wake me up. One nice thick floor mat for that cold spot on the cement floor next to my bed. One shower and washbowl near my bed. One barber who never heard of a GI haircut. A thousand gallons of white paint to paint all officers' cars, so I'll know whom to salute. One taxicab to take me around the base and between the base and town. One soft detail, beginning at 10 A. M., ending at 2 P. M., with two hours off for chow. One mess hall, soldiers club, PX, etc., where I would not have to stand in line. One blond, one brunette, one redhead, or any woman. One 30-day pass each month. That's all I want this year.

S/Sgt. R. C. Bolton
Lincoln, Nebraska

* * * * *

"Blessed Event"

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Lee announce the birth of a baby boy on December 16th, at the Shelby Hospital. Mrs. Lee is the former Miss Jesslyn Lattimore.

* * * * *

"Lord, suffer me to catch a fish, so large that even I, when talking of it afterwards, may have no need to lie."

* * * * *

Little Moron went to the football game because he thought that the quarterback was a refund.

* * * * *

"George Washington threw a dollar clear across the Potomac, but your dollar in War Bonds hits targets as far away as Tokyo and Berlin."